Seal Offers To Punch Schulte in Milk Inquiry

Both Shout 'Liar!' As Hearing Comes To Close; Jury Gets Case of Faulkner

By James D. Secrest.

The District milk inquiry broke up in an uproar yesterday in the caucus room of the House Office Building as several fist fights were threatened following an exchange of epithets between Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, and Corporation Counsel Seal.

The outburst, the most serious of a series of clashes that have marked the hearings from the beginning of the inquiry, came at the end of a drab day of testimony.

It was precipitated by the House sub-committee's ruling that only attorneys whose clients were mentioned in testimony could cross-examine witnesses. Previously, the committee had rescinded an order that the testimony of its accountant as to the books of distributors would be made in executive session.

"Outrageous," Says Barbour

After Chairman Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, had explained that the committee's ruling was made against his own wishes, John S. Barbour, counsel for the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, exclaimed:

"I consider this ruling an outrageous infringement of the rights of the public."

Seal added that he also would like to add his protest to the ruling.

"Are you speaking as corporation counsel or as attorney for the Maryland-Virginia Association?" Schulte asked.

Lie Is Hurled

"You've made that charge once too often," Seal shouted as he jumped to his feet and shook his finger at Schulte. "Either prove it or shut up."

Schulte retorted that he had heard Seal tell an official of the producers' association that he would "look out for their interests" in the investigation.

"You're a liar," barked Seal.

"You're a damn liar," shot back Schulte.

"I'll punch you in the face," shouted Seal.

"Don't be silly," Schulte came back as he muttered something about having the corporation counsel put out.

"You haven't the guts to put anyone out of here," Seal retorted defiantly.

"Sold Down the River"

Schulte turned to other sub-committee members while Chairman Bates rapped vainly for order, complaining, "We've been sold down the river."

"Who's been sold down the river?" Seal asked.

"The committee," responded Schulte. "You've done everything you could to protect the association. And they're trying to put the independents out of business. You asked for it and I gave it to you."

As Bates adjourned the hearing until this morning, C. V. Dye, an independent trucker, of Frederick, Md., tangled first with J. Edward Burroughs, counsel of the committee, and then with B. B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-Virginia association, who tried to quiet him.

Fists Are Put Up

Several attorneys stepped in to separate Dye and Derrick when Dye shouted to Derrick, some years his elder, to "take off your glasses." Derrick put up his fists as several men grabbed Dye.

"Why doesn't someone hold him?" shouted Schulte as he pointed at Derrick.

After the fracas had quieted and the crowd was dispersing, several Capitol policemen came rushing in

The Royal Approach

By Edward T. Folliard

A Staff Correspondent.

Aboard Royal Pilot Train, Chatham, Ont., June 6.—The headlight of a giant, crown-embossed locomotive was pointed toward Niagara Falls and Washington tonight.

Ten cars back rode King George VI and Queen Elizabeth with the most opulent royal caravan that Washington has ever seen. Not since 1896, in fact, has anything ever approached it. That was the year that Earl Li Hung Chang, special Ambassador of the Chinese Emperor, arrived in Washington with 40 secretaries and valets and with the coffin he carried on all his travels. Here is what Washington will see Thursday.

King George—he is a slender man of 44, with brown hair, blue eyes and a friendly smile. His photographs make him look much darker than he is. Like his brother, the Duke of Windsor, he is nervous and toys with his necktie. When he jammed his fingers in a train door near Winnipeg, he couldn't seem to leave the court plaster alone afterwards.

Drinks Scotch Whisky

He smokes cigarettes and brought along his own brand—a mixture of Turkish and Virginia—from London. When others offer him a cigarette, he graciously refuses and pulls out his own case. He drinks Scotch whisky, but in moderation. He has his own favorite brand, and this, too, he brought along.

He gets up at 7:30 a. m., shaves himself, puts on his clothes after his valet has laid them out, and eats a

Hull Departs

By Hedley Donovan.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull last night entrained for Niagara Falls for his first encounter with a British monarch, leaving behind 127,000 fellow townsmen eagerly awaiting the same experience tomorrow.

The ranking Cabinet member and his retinue left without so much as a single trumpet flourish in Union Station, where at 11 a. m. tomorrow they will escort King George and Queen Elizabeth through a double row of Marines to the thunderous welcome of a 21-gun salute.

Last night's only salute came from camera flash bulbs. Baggage vans rumbled past as the Secretary of State posed for pictures with Mrs. Hull and British Ambassador Sir Ronald Lindsay. The Secretary, dressed in blue suit, blue tie and hard collar, declined to wave his gray fedora, but obliged photographers with energetic efforts to engage the camera-shy Sir Ronald in conversation.

Welcome at 9:35 P. M. Today

Chief of Protocol George Summerlin expertly rolled a cigarette, but gave no indication whether he would repeat the performance for Their Majesties. Maj. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, designated as military aide to the King, and Rear Admiral James O. Richardson, naval aide, boarded the train in civilan dress.

As the President's special envoys roll northward to their historic rendezvous at Suspension Bridge Station, N. Y., the King-Emperor will be completing the triumphal tour of his most populous Dominion. The border welcome takes place at 9:35 p. m. today.

Still another opportunity for the District to see the King and Queen appeared yesterday with announcement that Washington Cathedral grounds will be open to the general public when the British rulers pause there at about 3:15 p. m. on the informal sightseeing tour planned for tomorrow afternoon.

$400,000 Asked For Introducing James Roosevelt

Cambridge, Mass., June 6 (U.P.)—Compensation of $400,000 for his services in arranging a meeting for two stockholders of the National Grain Yeast Corporation with James Roosevelt which resulted in election of the President's eldest son as president of the firm was asked tonight in a civil suit filed by Cornelius C. Sheridan, of Milton.

Sheridan named as defendants the corporation, address of which was not given, and Frank H. Hale, of Belleville, N. J., and Harold Goldman, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., whom he said were owners of the entire capital stock and constituted a majority of the directors. The suit was filed with Middlesex Superior Court.

Duff Cooper Would Answer Hitler by Expanding Army

London, June 6 (A.P.).—Chancellor Hitler's branding of England today as a colony robber drew from former first lord of the admiralty Alfred Duff Cooper the retort that Britain should answer with the signing of 100,000 army volunteers in 24 hours.

Duff Cooper, told a national service rally at Finchley that "Great Britain has today been called a thief."

"Those of us who still remember the times of peace before the last war realize it would have been unthinkable that a responsible man—if he is still responsible, which some of us begin to doubt from his actions and words—should launch so violent an insult at what is still the greatest and most powerful country in Europe."

Dairy Strike Averted by Compromise

Prospects Brighten In Construction Walkout; Picketing Is Called Off

Acceptance of a new contract giving weekly wage increases of 50 cents to $2 to the milk wagon drivers of 13 local dairies late last night put an end to fears that a tie-up of milk deliveries would further disturb the District labor front, already upset by a strike of building laborers and threatened strikes of carpenters and bakers.

James A. Holden, secretary treasurer and business agent of the Milk Drivers and Dairy Employes Union Local No. 246, announced settlement of the dairymen's dispute after a two-hour meeting of the union in the Masonic Temple.

Compromise Reached

The new one-year contract, affecting 11,000 drivers, was negotiated yesterday at a meeting with employers' representatives in the Hamilton Hotel and represent a compromise between present wages and the $1 to $3 raise asked by the union for helpers and skilled laborers now getting from $23 to $47 weekly.

"I can't say that we're happy about it, but I was glad to hear that they had accepted the compromise," commented Herman A. Schulteis, vice president of Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy and chairman of the employers' committee.

Picketing Called Off

Meanwhile, hopes appeared brighter last night for an early settlement of the building laborers' strike.

Larry Kelly, president of the Laborers' District Council, last night announced that picketing will be discontinued today on the construction projects, Federal and private, affected by the strike, which began Monday.

The decision to call off pickets was in response to a recommendation made earlier in the day by the executive board of the Washington Building Trades Council. John Locher, of that group, explained that picketing by union workmen of jobs where other union workmen were employed is inadvisable, unless nonunion workers are engaged on the same projects.

Support Pledged

The executive board, at the same time, adopted a motion pledging the laborers' union full support if any strikebreakers are hired. Locher said, however, that he had received assurance no such move was planned by any of the contractors.

Arranged by Howard T. Colvin, Labor Department conciliator, a meeting was held yesterday between representatives of the Carpenters Union and the Master Builders Association, but no definite settlement was reached. The carpenters, now receiving $12 for an eight-hour day, have voted to strike Monday unless they receive a new contract calling for a seven-hour $13 day.

Kelly voiced the opinion that the laborers' strike would not be terminated until the carpenter question is disposed of, but officials generally expected that both issues will

Roosevelt Cryptic as '40 Boom Grows

Workers' Alliance Backs Third Term as Iowan Says He'll 'Go Down the Line'

By International News Service.

In a day which saw the New Deal inner circle's "draft-Roosevelt" campaign echoing from the White House steps and the floor of the House, President Roosevelt late yesterday afternoon refused to be "smoked out" on his attitude toward a renomination.

Good-naturedly the President parried efforts of newsmen to draw him out on the third-term issue.

Mr. Roosevelt said he was not responsible for statements of political leaders who call on him and, pausing on the White House steps, indorse him for a third term.

Silent on Ickes

He declined comment also on the current magazine article of Interior Secretary Ickes, in which the undercover drive of the "palace guard" to "draft Roosevelt" was brought into the open Monday night. He had only seen the magazine headlines, Mr. Roosevelt said.

[The Workers' Alliance, leftist union of Works Progress Administration clients, holding a "right to work" conference here, passed a resolution yesterday opposing the Presidential candidacy of Vice President Garner, and calling on relief workers to "keep the New Deal in the White House."

Condemns Garner

[The resolution emenated from a Southern group and condemned Garner as representing "that group of Southern big land-owners who think only in terms of the exploitation of the poverty-stricken mass of the people." If he should be elected President, the resolution said, "it is our prediction that this Nation would suffer disaster."—Editor's note.]

The President's disavowal of third-term indorsements came when he was questioned regarding a statement of E. H. Birmingham, Iowa Democratic chairman, who visited the Executive earlier and announced, on leaving, he was "ready to go down the line" for a third term "if Mr. Roosevelt could be prevailed upon to accept the nomination."

Mr. Roosevelt, asked what he thought of Democrats openly seeking support for the Presidential nomination, chuckled that this was the fifty-seventh or fifty-eighth time this question had been put to him in a press conference.

Stand Is Positive

Birmingham, reporting a spread of the third-term movement to the Middle West, left no question of where he stood regarding several candidates prominently mentioned as potential candidates.

Unless the President is renominated, the Iowan said, he would support Postmaster General Farley or Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, a native of Iowa. Asked if he would support Vice President Garner, he replied:

"When I say what I have already, I am done."

Gamelin Named Chief Of All French Forces

Commander in Chief's Power Is Exceeded Only by Premier

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 6.—A soft-spoken 66-year-old army chieftain with a reputation for methodical efficiency, Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, today became supreme commander of France's defense forces.

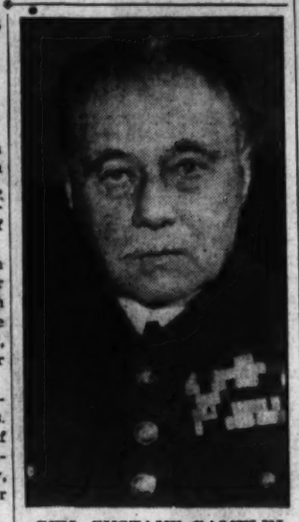
A cabinet decree concentrated in him more military power than ever before granted in the modern French republic except to his sole superior, Premier Daladier. Land, sea and air forces are unified under his command.

Gen. Gamelin also became commander in chief of the land forces. Rear Admiral Jean Darlin, chief of staff of the navy, and Gen. J. Vuillemin, chief of staff of the air army, moved up to similar titles in their respective forces.

Gen. Gamelin now is in London for military talks with British, Polish and Turkish officers.

Other ministerial decrees strengthened preparations for wartime defense. One would bring the ports of Le Havre and Bordeaux under immediate and strict military control in an emergency. Another provided credits for continued building up of reserve war supplies and a third tightened disciplinary rules for the merchant marine. Few details were disclosed.

Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet gave the ministers a long explanation of negotiations for a three-power mutual assistance agreement among France, Great Britain and Russia.



GEN. GUSTAVE GAMELIN

Bonnet was said to have obtained approval for continuing his diplomatic efforts to bring about a three-power pact.

Bonnet then had a long telephone conversation with Charles Corbin, French Ambassador in London, on the French suggestions for a revival of the pact negotiations.

The British cabinet is to consider the question tomorrow, it was understood.

MacLeish, 47, To Be Congress Librarian

Roosevelt to Submit Name of Poet and Veteran to Senate

Archibald MacLeish, poet and former war-time artillery officer, who is just one month more than 47, will become Librarian of Congress if that body approves a nomination that President Roosevelt said yesterday he would submit to the Senate.

The appointment will retire Dr. Herbert Putnam who, on April 5, celebrated the completion of 40 years as librarian, in which time he had built the library to world pre-eminence. On July 1 last year Dr. Putnam was made librarian emeritus by act of Congress in token of his long and distinguished service. Since then he has continued to perform the duties that he first assumed, after declining them, in 1899.

No formal announcement of Dr. Putnam's retirement from active service had been made before the President's announcement yesterday. It was explained that the post to be filled cannot at any time be left vacant, and therefore the retirement could not become effective until another librarian had been nominated and confirmed.

President Roosevelt referred to the great difficulty of the post, and its requirement of a man who besides being "a gentleman and scholar" was a good administrator. These qualifications, he added, the nominee has in a high degree.

Barred in Cuba, Refugee Ship Heads Home

German Vessel Starts Back After Final Rejection by Havana

Their hopes of landing in the New World dashed by the Cuban government's refusal for the second time to give them asylum, the passengers tonight were bound back up the Florida coast from a point approximately 100 miles north of Havana.

The big ship had wandered up and down the coast since Friday, awaiting the outcome of negotiations by welfare agencies with President Laredo Bru for permission for its downhearted passengers to land.

The Cuban government said it would considered no further attempts to obtain even temporary landing permits for the refugees and informed steamship companies that no more Jewish refugees would be admitted to Cuba.

Compromise Fails

Efforts to reach a compromise broke down when a noon deadline passed without acceptance by refugee representatives of a Cuban plan to create a temporary haven on the Isle of Pines.

The government had asked Lawrence Berenson, New York counsel for Jewish relief organizations, to post a bond of $500 for each refugee—a total of $453,500—and give additional pledges that the refugees would not become public charges if permitted to land.

Offer of $443,000 bond made by Berenson was to include 252 refugees aboard two other ships which in addition to the St. Louis have been barred by Cuba.

Berenson's unsuccessful offer to the Cuban government included a $200,000 deposit in the National City Bank of New York, $40,000 subscribed by the refugees themselves and his promise that he would try to raise the remainder—$203,000—from New York Jewish aid organizations.

Goldsborough's Congress Seat Won By State Sen. Ward

Salisbury, Md., June 6 (A.P.).—State Senator David J. Ward (Democrat), won former Representative T. Alan Goldsborough's seat today, on the basis of virtually complete unofficial returns from the Eastern Shore's special First District election.

The 58-year-old business-man-farmer held a 3,894 vote lead over A. Stengle Marine, Cambridge Republican, on tabulations from 190 of the 191 polling places. The vote was: Ward, 14,599; Marine, 10,705.

Test Vote Backs Repeal Of Arms Embargo

Party Line Ballot Rejects Rep. Vorys' Proposal to Continue Ban on Shipments

By Robert C. Albright.

Administration recommendations for repeal of mandatory arms embargo provisions of the neutrality act were upheld yesterday in a significant test vote by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Balloting strictly on party lines, the committee rejected, 13 to 8, an amendment to continue the ban on arms and ammunition shipments.

Put forward by Representative Vorys (Republican), of Ohio, the amendment was slightly less drastic than the existing arms embargo. It would have placed no restriction on other so-called "implements of war" or on sales to neutral states for transshipment.

Extended Debate

The vote followed extended committee debate, accompanied by Democratic charges of a Republican effort to delay action and Republican counter-charges of "gag" procedure.

A record 11 to 9 vote, cutting off debate, preceded the "aye" and "no" count rejecting the amendment. The rejection left unchanged embargo repeal provisions of a bill introduced last week by Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, acting chairman of the committee, embracing all the neutrality recommendations of Secretary of State Hull.

Although Republican committeemen were preparing for another attempt today to continue in force present restrictions on shipment of arms to belligerents in wartime, yesterday's vote apparently presaged Administration victory in the committee on the key issue in pending neutrality legislation.

Schiffler Proposal Up Today

Today's arms embargo attempt is expected to be made by Representative Schiffler (Republican), of West Virginia. More sweeping than the Vorys proposal rejected yesterday, his move would continue the ban on "implements of war" and sales to neutrals for transshipment as well as the flat embargo on arms and ammunition. The Schiffler proposal follows closely present law provisions and would extend civil strife sections left out of the Bloom draft.

Acting Chairman Bloom meantime determined to press for final committee action today if possible. An afternoon as well as the regular morning meeting of the committee may be ordered in an effort to report the bill.

Decision for the House to move first on neutrality legislation recently was reached at a White House leadership conference, after a sharply divided Senate Foreign Relations Committee postponed further consideration of conflicting drafts until June 14. Chairman Pittman had been threatened with Senate filibuster by members of the mandatory neutrality bloc if he succeeded in reporting a bill repealing the arms embargo.

Report This Week

Present strategy contemplates a report this week by the House Foreign Affairs Committee and possible House consideration within the next fortnight. If the House passes the measure, the Administration will press the bill in the Senate despite filibuster warnings. Tied up with fate of the bill is the Congressional adjournment date, tentatively set for July 15 but likely to be postponed into August if a bitter-end Senate fight develops.

The revised Bloom bill authorizes the President to proclaim a state of foreign war and name the nations involved whenever he finds "it is necessary to protect the security or

2,200 Hail Mooney as He Chides Garner; Marcantonio Collects 'Answers to Pegler'

Pardoned Convict Praises Roosevelt As Friend of Labor

Tom Mooney last night reached the end of the trail from San Quentin Penitentiary to the Mayflower Hotel.

Turned out to greet the veteran of 23 years' incarceration were 2,200 persons, who cheered him in three standing ovations, each lasting two minutes or more—as motley a gathering as the distinguished hotel has ever sheltered, from Senators and Government officials to men in working clothes, and admirers of every age and color.

Mooney, stocky, cheerful and unhurried, bettling heavy eyed over a text made difficult to read by prison-dimmed eyes, launched into an hour's address of forthright praise and denunciation, the former for the New Deal, President Roosevelt, the La Follette Committee, the Labor Relations Board, Social Security and Wage-Hour laws; the latter for the Dies Committee, "special interests' who fight labor organizations, Vice President Garner and a "retired screwball general" financed by "men of wealth . . . for the purpose of overthrowing our democracy, our Constitution and our Government."

Following Mooney's speech, Representative Marcantonio (American Labor Party), of New York, gathered a collection which appeared to run into four figures to finance Mooney's projected speaking tour of the country. Asking the crowd to "show your answer to Westbrook Pegler's column," which scored Mooney as a person who would have to return to work if Billings were freed, Marcantonio collected sums ranging from $50 bills to small change. He prophesied that Mooney's Washington appearance would go down in history as a vastly more important visit "than that which will take place Thursday."

Other objects of Mooney's shafts were the justices of the Supreme Court who upheld "this monstrous, judicial lynching" of his conviction.

"We are hoping," he said, "that fate will be kind to the five remaining old men on the bench and spare them for many years of happiness in retirement off the bench because of their great age and infirmities; that they will be replaced by additional justices who will think in terms of the living present instead of the dead past."

Principal themes of the man convicted for the San Francisco Preparedness Day parade were the freeing of his fellow convict, Warren Billings, and the unity of the split forces in American labor unionism.

Mooney was introduced on his first visit to Washington since his trip with Eugene Debs in 1908 by Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, as "a great and gallant

The "mystery statue" which will gaze down at the scene when Congress greets the King and Queen in the rotunda is a likeness of Edward F. Baker, who was a Representative from Illinois and a Senator from Oregon. He left the Senate to fight in the Civil War, and was slain in action . . . There was quite a rumpus then about installing his statue in the rotunda, but the Senate insisted on placing him with Washington, Lincoln, et al, and deservedly. When a Senator goes to war that's news.

Insiders in Manhattan journalism—including editors, publishers and some who have been eminently connected with the New York Post—are now more than half convinced that President Roosevelt intends to become editor of that newspaper in 1941 if he isn't still living in the White House. There's even a rumor that friends will buy the New York Post for him.

". . . as editor F. D. R. will be boss?"

A former editor of the New York Post asserts that Roosevelt will not be merely a "contributing editor," as was his cousin Teddy when he joined the staff of Outlook magazine in 1909 . . . No, indeed; he will be on the job regularly and boss the paper, "keep alive the New Deal doctrines, center an opposition to the Republicans and keep himself well before his public."

* * * *

The President has, of course, had valuable newspaper experience, not only as a campus editor at Harvard but also through invaluable contacts with Washington newsmen (not to mention his discussions with American editors each year at the White House.) These contacts will, of course, be most helpful to him.

* * * *

The President has very precise journalistic beliefs. When he appointed his son, James, a White House secretary he told the newsmen the story was worth "only two paragraphs on Page 5." His colleagues will watch to see whether, should President Vandenberg or President Taft appoint a son as White House secretary, or should President Dewey draft an uncle for such a job, Franklin Roosevelt's Post would print the story on Page 3.

". . . our heroes avert their eyes"

By a singular and curious coincidence, all the statues of America's great ones stand with eyes averted from the spot in the Capitol rotunda where King George VI will be welcomed by the members of Congress. All are looking away except Alexander Hamilton, and he gazes moodily at the floor. On the face of Lafayette, incidentally, rests an expression of what seems to be ineffable but good-humored boredom.

Gen. Marshall is scheduled to sail tomorrow morning with Gen. Pedro de Góes Monteiro, Brazil's chief of staff, who is paying a return visit to the United Saties.

Mead Bill's Aims Indorsed By Roosevelt

But He Holds Study Needed to Find Best Way to Aid Business

President Roosevelt yesterday endorsed the objective of the Mead bill to provide for insurance by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for loans by banks to small business. Whether its express provisions are the answer, he declared, must be developed through study.

The President's remarks followed testimony before the Senate Banking Committee Monday by Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board that the bill would prove ineffective.

Hopkins Parley

Differences between Eccles and other New Dealers over the bill figured, it is understood, in a luncheon meeting yesterday in the office of Secretary of Commerce Hopkins at which the small business credit problem was discussed.

The meeting, which Hopkins said would be the forerunner of others, reflects, it is believed, Administration determination to bring about a meeting of minds within its own ranks and to get behind a concerted small business aid program.

Roosevelt's Powers

Other business developments yesterday were:

The Senate Banking Committee, by an 11-to-7 vote, authorized a favorable report on the bill, already passed by the House, continuing beyond June 30 the President's power to devalue the dollar down to 50 per cent, the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and the authority to pay a premium for newly mined domestic silver.

Led by Will Hays, "czar" of the motion picture industry, heads of big movie companies under indictment conferred with Commerce Department officials. The Commerce Department is advising industries how to comply with the law.

Survey Asked

Hopkins announced, following the luncheon conference, that he had asked Administration officials to make a survey of means for increasing long-term credit to small business.

Besides Hopkins, those attending the meeting were Eccles, Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the RFC, Emil Schram, a RFC director; Chairman Jerome Frank of the Securities and Exchange Commission, Leon Henderson, an SEC member; Benjamin Cohen, Administration "trouble-shooter," and Herbert Gaston, recently named Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Motion picture producers present at the Commerce Department conference were: Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth-Century Fox; George J. Schaefer, president of RKO-Radio Corporation; Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., and Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, Inc.

Suit May Be Settled

Dr. Willard L. Thorp, department economics adviser, who represented Hopkins at the conference, admitted the discussion might result in a consent decree settlement of the antitrust group.

The Senate Banking Committee rejected, by a 9 to 9 vote, an attempt by Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, to delete from the bill extending monetary powers the authority to cut the gold content of the dollar in half.

Stanley was icily silent while the House roared with laughter.

The Gallup Poll

Many Voters Think Business Would Be Better Under G. O. P., Survey Finds

By Dr. George Gallup,

By American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, June 6.—Important indications that American voters are beginning to link the symbol of prosperity more with the Republican Party than with the Democratic Party are revealed in a survey of national sentiment just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

As the Roosevelt Administration casts about for ways to stimulate business recovery in advance of the 1940 campaign, the Institute put the following issue to a cross-section of voters throughout the country:

"Do you think business would be more prosperous or less prosperous if we had a Republican President in the White House?"

The largest single group said they thought conditions would be more prosperous—about twice as many as said business would either be worse or about the same.

The actual vote follows:

More prosperous	50%
Less prosperous	28
About the same	34

The fact that the largest group voted "more prosperous" has considerable political significance. It meant that the Democrats will have to combat the feeling that prosperity would be made more certain by following the ideas of the Republican Party. Whether this feeling persists will depend a good deal on the success of the new pump-priming program which Administration leaders are said to be developing. If, a year in advance of the campaign, half the voters already think business would be better under a Republican, a downswing in the business cycle through 1940 would seriously aggravate the problems of the Democratic Party.

An overwhelming proportion of Republican voters think business would be better under a Republican, while a substantial number of Democrats think it would be worse. However, approximately one Democrat in every four thinks it would be better.

	Reps.	Dems.
More prosperous	85%	29%
Less prosperous	3	43
About the same	12	28

Division of Opinion Noted by Income Groups

The survey reveals that the Republicans would probably have considerable difficulty convincing voters in the lower income level that business would be any better under a Republican. These voters, earning $20 a week or less and including persons on relief, are much more skeptical of a return to prosperity under the G. O. P. than are voters in the upper income levels.

	More Prosperous Per cent	Less prosperous Per cent	About the same Per cent
Upper income voters	62	20	18
Middle income voters	54	22	24
Lower income voters	40	34	26
Reliefers	37	38	25

Those voters who argue that conditions would be more prosperous under a Republican declare that "businessmen would co-operate more with the Government," that business has "always been better under the Republicans," and that businessmen are "holding back until a Republican gets into the White House."

Those who think conditions would be worse say that a Republican would "undo all the good that Roosevelt has done" or that the Republicans would "cut down on spending so that people would either starve or have less money to spend."

Cleveland, June 6 (AP).—Senator Burton Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, told the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen's convention today that railroad legislation now grinding through Congress was "not a panacea" for the carriers' ills, but was "another step in the right direction."

The president of an aviation supply company told a Senate Labor subcommittee yesterday that representatives of the National Labor Relations Board had tried to "blackmail" and coerce him into surrendering to union demands.

F. Leroy Hill, president and general manager of Air Associate, Inc., Garden City, N. Y., made these charges at a hearing on proposed amendments to the National Labor Relations Act.

A representative of the American Bankers Association urged Congress yesterday to go slow in setting up what he described as a new Federal system of mutual savings banks.

A. L. M. Wiggins, of Hartsville, S. C., former A. B. A. president and now its legislative chairman, asserted that he considered proposed amendments to the Home Loan Bank act a move to give building and loan associations the privilege of savings banks.

Bearing an American flag, a delegation of natives of India called upon Chairman Dickstein (Democrat), of New York, of the House Immigration Committee, yesterday to ask his co-operation in their efforts to become citizens.

Ex-Communist Says He Was Taught in Moscow To Convert Army, Navy

"Special attention" to the armed forces of the United States was urged on American students at a school for communism in Moscow, a House investigating committee heard yesterday.

Charles H. White, colored former Communist who said he attended the school seven years ago, testified that he and 100 other Americans there received instructions to consider the military forces "the chief arena of activity for recruiting members of the Communist Party."

He added that the students were advised to carry Communist doctrine to the soldiers and sailors through "young girls," who could approach the military men more easily than could male propagandists.

Asserting his trip to Moscow was paid for by the Communist Party, White said he received instruction in street fighting and the use of barricades, riding and shooting, use of machine guns and military strategy.

The witness, who resigned from the Communist Party in 1936 and is employed on the WPA Federal Arts Project in New York, said that the American "hunger march" of 1932-3 was planned in Moscow and that Herbert Benjamin, now secretary of the Workers' Alliance, worked on it there.

Alliance's Membership

Testifying before the House committee investigating the WPA, White said a large proportion of the members of the Workers' Alliance are Communists. Other persons join the alliance, he said, because it is patronized by public officials.

Referring to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's scheduled appearance today at a congress sponsored by the alliance, White asked, "Who could call the Workers' Alliance subversive when he knows that the President's wife is going to take part in a conference?"

Another colored witness, Mrs. Frankie Duty, of New York, former member of the Communist Party and ex-officer of the Workers' Alliance, told the committee, "You have to understand that the Workers' Alliance is the Communist Party—it's the nursery from which party members are finally recruited."

A bitter protest against the conception that members of the Communist Party have no right to be on WPA rolls was voiced by Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, committee member who has consistently defended WPA in the public hearings.

Insurance Firms May Face Trust Suit

SEC Charges 19 Companies Fix Basic Rates for Group Life

The Justice Department is considering bringing an antitrust suit against leading life insurance companies as a result of information unearthed in the monopoly commitee's investigation.

This was disclosed yesterday as the committee heard charges by the Securities and Exchange Commission that 19 principal life insurance companies virtually fix by concerted action basic rates for group life insurance.

The Justice Department plans, it is understood, to begin a study of "price-fixing" complaints against the companies.

Staff Increase Sought

Actual preparation of the case probably will await Congressional action on the department's request for a substantial increase in its antitrust legal staff, it was said.

With Gerhard Gesell, SEC attorney, making the presentation, the commission attempted to sketch at the Monopoly Committee hearing the development of combined action by life insurance companies so far as group life insurance is concerned.

Witnesses were B. D. Flynn, vice president and actuary of the Travelers' Insurance Co., Hartford, and E. E. Cammack, vice president and actuary of the Aetna Life Insurance Co.

Recommendations Followed

Cammack admitted, under questioning by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, committee chairman, that the insurance superintendent of New York State, in fixing basic rates for group insurance as authorized by State law, "almost invariably" follows the recommendations of the "Group Association," with a membership of 19 leading life insurance companies.

This then becomes the legal rate in New York, he certified, and is applicable to all companies in the country writing group insurance in New York State. Virtually all other companies, he declared, follow these rates.

Cammack said the rates were agreed upon on the basis of experience and that the New York official was given only the composite agreement and not the individual experience of any company which might disagree with the majority.

Flynn said five leading companies had maintained uniform rates since 1919 to prevent "ruinous competition." When the question of antitrust law violation was raised in 1925, he said, the group discontinued discussion of rates in meetings and maintained rates under "gentlemen's agreements" reached in informal discussions by company actuaries.

He admitted that these rates became the basic charges on group life policies when the New York insurance law went into effect in 1926.

A. F. L. Takes Back Martin's Former C. I. O. Union

The American Federation of Labor yesterday took back a bolting faction of one important Congress of Industrial Organization affiliate on terms which John L. Lewis has advanced unsuccessfully as the basis for labor peace.

A. F. of L. President William Green returned the original A. F. of L. charter to Homer Martin's branch of the United Automobile Workers' Union, but did not answer newspapermen's request for specific definition of the union's jurisdiction which may conflict with that of other important A. F. of L. unions. Martin claims membership of 70,000 in his following:

Lewis, president of the C. I. O., has contended that the proper way to end the C. I. O.- A. F. of L. war would be for the A. F. of L. to accept all the C. I. O. unions, or the C. I. O. accept all the C. I. O. unions, or the C. I. O. accept all A. F. of L. unions, and iron out conflicting jurisdictions later.

A Word in the Governor's Ear

1,800 Dedicate Rogers Statue In Capitol

Garner, Jesse Jones Take Part in Honor to 'American Spokesman'

A bronze statue of Will Rogers, executed by Jo Davidson and portraying the humorist, hands in pockets, lounging on his feet, was revealed before a crowd of 1,800 in the Rotunda of the Capitol yesterday afternoon, when his "Sister Sally" and Will Hays, the movie czar, pulled the lines which raised an American flag over it.

It was the unveiling of Oklahoma's second nominee for the Hall of Fame in Statutary Hall. Besides throngs of Oklahomans, visitors to Washington, and members of both Houses of Congress, Vice President Garner shared in the ceremonies, as did Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Presentation of the statue was made by Gov. Phillips, of Oklahoma.

In telling of the appropriation by the sixteenth Oklahoma Legislature to make possible creation of the statue, Gov. Phillips referred to Rogers as "the archtype of the American people, the plain and kindly spokesman of the inarticulate."

In accepting the statue Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, chairman of the Joint Library Committee, called attention to the fact that Rogers' memorial made the twelfth of those of citizens who had never held public office among the 72 statues in Statuary Hall.

Mrs. Sally McSpadden, of Chelsea, Okla., was introduced by Gov. Phillips as Will Rogers' "Sister Sally" and one who often had taken the place of a mother for him. Other members of his family stood silently in the audience.

Joseph H. Benton, a graduate of the University of Oklahoma, who is billed with the Metropolitan Opera Company as Guiseppe Bentonelli, and the Navy Band provided music. Rogers was eulogized by Norris G. Henthorne, editor of the Tulsa World; Luther Harrison, editorial writer for the Daily Oklahoman, and Walter M. Harrison, managing editor of the Daily Oklahoman and Times, who presided. The invocation was pronounced by the Rev. ZeBarney Thorne Phillips, chaplain of the Senate, and the benediction by the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House.

Wage-Hour Change Fought By Andrews

'Lobby' Seeking to Emasculate Act, Says Administrator

As Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer Andrews denounced proposed amendments to the wage-hour law, reports persisted in the House yesterday that the farm bloc will force some legislative action before end of the session.

"Powerful lobby groups," said Andrews, are trying to emasculate the act by voting amendments that "should be entitled, 'a bill to lower wages and establish longer hours of work'."

Andrews' blast followed a decisive House vote Monday against considering the proposed amendments under procedure that would have limited debate and prevented further alteration. The amendments, which Chairman Norton, (Democrat), of New Jersey, of the Labor Committee, said "may go too far," did not go far enough for the farm bloc in exempting agricultural workers.

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, a leader in the fight for further exemptions, said "members" of the Labor Committee will ask the Rules Committee for a rule on a previously introduced bill to amend the wage-hour law, in order to get it before the House subject to full debate.

Cox, a member of the Rules Committee added that his group would grant the rule, but refused to name the Labor Committee member who would make the request. At least one Republican and one Democratic member agreed yesterday this procedure would be followed.

Mrs. Norton, however, declared she had "utmost confidence" in the "loyalty" of her committee.

Roosevelt Puts Aside Western Trip Plans

Tour Now Depends On Congress Action On Vital Bills

Fearing legislation to continue work relief and expiring nuisance taxes might get into a jam, President Roosevelt yesterday laid aside plans for a transcontinental tour scheduled to begin June 15 or 16.

Another reason for his decision, the President explained at his press conference, is the uncertainty as to whether Congress will finish its work and adjourn by July 15. He had planned to visit the San Francisco World's Fair, and go on to Alasaka, if he had been sure Congress would be in session until after that date.

Plans for the tour had been linked to agitation in the New Deal sector of the Democratic Party for a third term for the President.

Still May Make Tour

Mr. Roosevelt made clear he might revive plans for the tour later. He will canvass the situation on June 24 or 25, he said, and if it appears then that Congress may be in session for some time—and some prophecies are that the session may last until fall—he may leave for the trip July 3.

Asked if the bill to continue monetary powers which expire June 30 was another reason for not making the tour at this time, the President remarked this was not as essential as the need for continuing relief and nuisance taxes. He made no mention of plans to revise corporation taxes to stimulate business.

He laid particular stress on the need for quick action on relief legislation. "Nuisance" taxes, which are among the Government's most reliable revenue producers, expire June 30, and by all means must be continued, he added.

The President has asked Congress for an appropriation of $1,477,000,000 to continue the Works Progress Administration for the new fiscal year, beginning July 1. A House Appropriations sub committee now is drafting the legislation, but a fight over earmarking some of the money for the Public Works Administration may disturb prospects for early passage.

CCC Camp Prepares to Greet Royalty

Fort Hunt, Va., Enrolees Ready for Dress Parade

One hundred and eighty-seven Civilian Conservation Corps enrollees are staging a burst of activity at their Fort Hunt, Va., camp which makes a beehive, by comparison, look like a ghost mining town on Sunday.

The occasion for the bustle, which is running up a fat overtime work record for the boys, is the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth on Friday. Although every effort is being made to present the camp just as it is—with the typical equipment and atmosphere of any one of several hundred CCC camps—extra energy is being devoted to making the dress parade something for the books.

According to Educational Director James A Halloran, jr., the feeling at the camp is similar to that of a college just before the big game.

"At first, the boys took it as routine," Halloran said, "but during the last couple of days the excitement is growing."

The refurbishing of the camp consists largely in the acceleration of the normal "spring housecleaning," with the annual paint job being put on a few days early, and some extra close grass clipping, and extra special window and equipment washing.

The uniforms, incidentally, will be marked on the sleeves with insignia of gold chevrons indicating junior and senior leaders, and will be topped off by a new cotton, rather than woolen, overseas cap, carrying the CCC insignia. The uniform, which will be regulation this summer, will be worn for the first time Friday.

Amercian Is 'Dean' Of King's Guard

The "dean" of British ex-service men who will form the guard of honor for Their Majesties at the Embassy Friday morning is a genial chap, 30 years a resident of Washington, who ran away from home to fight for Queen Victoria in 1880.

That title of "dean," strictly unofficial, refers to seniority in beginning military service to the British Crown.

The dean, then, will be William Henry Douse, 12 years in Her Majesty's Royal Marines, holder of medals for the Egyptian and Suaki campaigns and, today, a jolly chap of 75 who lives with his wife at 1903 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Douse's name is one of the 23 on the "distinguished list" for the ex-service men's party, these 23 being the sort of creme de la creme of 250.

Born in London, he was a grocer's boy in Fleet street when, at 16, he ran away to join the Marines.

Leaving the service in 1892, he began a career as a butler and "gentleman's gentleman."

Incidentally one of the few American-born former service men on the "distinguished list" is DeWitt Harry, president of the Washington Chapter, Izaak Walton League Employed as a newspaperman in Winnipeg in 1916, he joined a Canadian infantry battalion and went overseas to spend 37 months. He came back with the Distinguished Conduct Medal and the Croix de Guerre.

Police 'Clean Up' For Royal Visit

To protect the thousands who will be here for the visit of the King and Queen, Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson has ordered his men to rid the city of suspected pickpockets, penny matchers and confidence men.

Squads of detectives have been ordered to watch bus stations, airports and the Union Station.

Police Court Judge John P. McMahon has given his full co-operation to the drive by giving the maximum sentence to a suspected penny matcher charged with vagrancy.

U. S. Refuses Bail to Irish Republican Chief; Terrorist Link Sought in Shot Near Duchess

Court Fails to Find Whether Gun Was Aimed at Marina

By the Associated Press.

London, June 6.—A middle-aged cyclist was presented in magistrate's court today as the man who fired a sawed-off shotgun near the Duchess of Kent and then pedaled off briskly, insisting solemnly he was "quite in order."

The sworn story of the strange perambulations of Ledwedge Vincent Lawlor, 45-year-old steelworker, left unanswered however, the principal question in the case—whether he had aimed his weapon deliberately at the duchess, King George's sister-in-law, or had merely fired at random.

His appearance in Westminster Police Court was brief and his case was adjourned for a week while authorities held him for a continued investigation into the gunshot in Belgrave Square last night when the duchess was leaving her residence for a movie.

Charged with illegal possession of a firearm "with intent to endanger life or property," Lawlor sat by silently as a police constable testified that the prisoner excused his action, when seized on his bicycle, by producing a permit for his gun and saying:

"I did not hit anyone, did I? It is quite in order. I have a certificate."

Lawlor gave his occupation as a welder and his address as in southeast London.

Scotland Yard started an investigation whether a planned terrorist campaign was responsible for the Belgrave Square incident and for another in which a window pane in the home of the princess royal, the King's sister, was punctured. Police had under consideration the possibility that sympathizers with the outlawed Irish Republican Army were responsible.

Russell Seized in Detroit Just Before Sovereigns' Visit

By International News Service.

Detroit, June 6.—Sean Russell, chief of staff of the outlawed Irish republican army, was in custody today, a few hours before the King and Queen against whom he has declared war were due to arrive at Windsor, across the river from Detroit.

Thomas F. Chawke, attorney for Russell, was attempting to gain his client's freedom on bail, but had met with no success late today.

Seized on Arrival

Russell was seized by immigration officers on his arrival in Detroit last evening, on the chance he had entered the United States on an improper passport. The order for his arrest came from Washington, immigration officials here said.

Chawke laughed at rumors Russell's detention was necessary to protect King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Nevertheless, it was reported Russell's arrest was the result of messages relayed from Scotland Yard to Great Britain's foreign office, to the United States Department of State, to immigration authorities.

On a Lecture Tour

Russell, on a lecture tour of the United States, declared two weeks ago at San Francisco that a "state of war" exists between Ireland and Great Britain, and added:

"We declared war on the 12th of last January."

Russell also has been quoted as publicly stating that he personally ordered the recent bombings in England.

pageantry rivaling the pomp of an Old World state visit.

The city yesterday acknowledged new masters, the Secret Service and State Department Protocol Division, and gave every indication of enjoying their benevolent dictatorship. Shopkeepers on lower Pennsylvania avenue reported with a glow of self-importance their interviews with the Treasury agents, while District officials parried questions with the explanation, "That's up to the protocol people."

In hangars at Langley Field, Va., on the manicured lawns of the British Embassy, at police precinct stations and in the cool nave of Washington Cathedral, men charged with the success of a few seconds of the royal visit carefully rehearsed their part in the intricate arrangements.

Still undecided, however, was the weather's all-important role in tomorrow's program. The morning will be warm and partly cloudy, the bureau predicted last night, while warning of "a slightly worse than even chance" for showers in the afternoon, when the British Embassy gives its garden party for the King and Queen.

Full military honors will be accorded Their Majesties on arrival at the Washington Navy Yard Friday noon. A 21-gun salute will be fired when the King's car enters the main gate, while armed Bluejackets and Marines in summer dress uniform present arms as the royal party drives to the wharf.

After the Navy Band plays "God Save the King," the royal visitors will be piped aboard by the boatswain of the Presidential yacht Potomac. As the yacht weighs anchor for the cruise to Mount Vernon, the guns will blast out again the traditional salute for the head of a state.

Alexandrians yesterday planned al fresco luncheons on lawns that border the King's route through the city from Mount Vernon to Arlington Friday afternoon.

Mount Vernon Memorial Boulevard, they recalled, parallels much of the old Kings highway of colonial days, the same road taken by Braddock when King George III sent him west to subdue the French and Indians.

Alexandrians are confident the King and Queen will take a lively interest in their city's rich associations with an older America.

Window space overlooking tomorrow morning's parade route is still available along lower Pennsylvania avenue at from $2 to $4 a head, a survey showed.

In Federal Triangle buildings strategic windows have all been spoken for. Balconies on the third and fifth floors of the Apex Building are to be occupied by members and guests of the Federal Trade Commission, while the seventh floor balcony is reserved for FTC employes and their friends. Employes have been asked to "be considerate" in making up their guest lists.

Powder Room At Depot Ready For Royal Nose

Procurement Division Does Itself Proud in State Suit at Station

If the Queen wishes to powder her nose at the Union Station there will be a gold and blue room handy. Part of the redecorated state suite, the powder room, is the special pride of the Procurement Division and all Government officials who helped buy the furnishings.

Where other furniture in the suite is along modified American lines, that in the powder room is of delicate Sheraton design.

The other upholstery is in blue leather, but in this room it is in a special gold fabric. There is a regally slender sofa, also upholstered in gold cloth, and several delicate chairs.

The carpet is a shade lighter, but blends with the royal blue carpet which covers the reception hall and the foyer. A 6-foot carpet runner, also royal blue in color, will extend from the foyer to the curb, where Their Majesties' automobiles will await them—and even fold down on the drive a bit, so as not to look skimpy. All of it is edged with gold.

From the train, along the station platform and through the concourse, wide runners of red carpet, which is considered more conventional for royalty's footsteps, will be used.

The Procurement Division kept "well within" the $18,000 appropriated for refurnishing the State suite, officials declared. But they had to do some borrowing to make that possible. The four pieces of fine statuary and the huge antique vase in the reception hall were loaned by the Smithsonian Institution.

Windsor, Ont., June 6.—A crowd of Americans expected to total half a million, staged a peaceful invasion of Canada at the rate of 30,000 an hour today in the hope of catching a glimpse of King George and Queen Elizabeth during their scheduled 15-minute reception here this evening.

Most of the visitors were from Detroit, city of 1,500,000, just across the mile-wide Detroit River from Windsor. They crossed the river by tunnel, by bridge and by special ferries pressed into service, arriving in such crowds as to outnumber Windsor's own 100,000 citizens.

The King and Queen were due here at 7:30 p. m., E. S. T., to wind up a day of touring across southern Ontario, but their train left Toronto 29 minutes late and was 40 minutes late in arriving at Kitchener.

The day's schedule included brief stops at Guelph, Kitchener, Stratford and Windsor, and in addition a brief service stop at Toronto. Their Majesties paid Toronto, one of Canada's largest cities, an official visit May 22.

R. H. WEIGHTMAN, the "weatherman," looked at the sky yesterday and detected signs of very hot weather and thunderstorms tomorrow, the day King George and Queen Elizabeth will come to Washington. However, Weightman, forecaster for the Weather Bureau, suggested his forecast might have to be revised. Said he: "You know the weather!"

Embassy Factotum Is D. C. Native

The British Embassy said: "Oh yes, Browne will be there. Of course he will be there."

Charles F. M. Browne, 51 years at the Embassy, its unofficial historian, recipient of the Order of the British Empire, general factotum and courier.

It's very probable that His Majesty himself has heard of Charles F. M. Browne, who has served here under 10 British Ambassadors and more than 230 members of the official staff. They all call him "Charlie."

And Charles F. M. Browne is a native Washingtonian.

Bad Weather Won't Halt Garden Party

White Suits Will Be in Order for Male Guests, Lady Lindsay Says

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Rain or shine—drizzle, downpour or sizzling sun—the garden party for the King and Queen will take place at the British Embassy Thursday afternoon.

Lady Lindsay said so at her press conference yesterday when she announced final plans for Their Majesties' three visits to the British Embassy—on Thursday afternoon, for the garden fete; on Friday morning when they will greet British subjects of this community; and on Friday evening when they entertain at dinner in honor of President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

While the chatelaine of the British Embassy realizes that a summer shower in Washington has little in common with a London drizzle or "a nice Scotch mist," she knows also that postponement of the garden party is impossible and cancellation not advisable. So she's keeping her fingers crossed and hoping against hope the "Lindsay Luck" that has summoned sunshine on many a day set for a British Embassy garden party will hold out one more time.

No Change in Plans

Anyway, there will be no change in plans. If there's a thunder shower or flood morning, noon, early afternoon or on until dusk, the party will go on; and guests can take their choice of braving a cloudburst to see a royal couple or of staying high and dry at home.

Cool and comfortable "summer whites" will be as appropriate for male apparel as cutaways and striped trousers, Lady Lindsay implied when questioned, once more, about suitable garden party attire.

Lady Lindsay credited the recent expansion of the guest list to "self-indulgence" on the part of the British Ambassador and herself. They had a sincere desire to include as many guests as possible and still prevent having a milling mob, so when several regrets came in, they found it possible to invite an additional number of persons and decided to include all Senators and their wives not asked at first.

1,400 to 1,500 Invites

The guest list, which stands between 1,400 and 1,500, is now definitely closed as there won't be time from now on to send any invitations and get replies, she added.

Roses in the Embassy garden are not co-operating very well for Their Majesties' garden party, according to Lady Lindsay who knows her blossoms down to the last bud. A riot of glory last week, most of the roses are now enjoying a 10-day rest period, she said. The one named after her, however, "The Honorable Lady Lindsay" is holding up pretty well and promises to have its face out for the royal garden party.

Dressed in colorful Canadian Highlander costumes, George Tizzard, chancery messenger who has added a picturesque note to many British Embassy functions, will be at the door of the Embassy to welcome guests on Thursday, Lady Landsay said. She also mentioned that:

The King and Queen, who will arrive at 5 o'clock, are expected to stay until after 6.

Guests invited to greet the King and Queen on the portico will be expected to arrive before Their Majesties.

Presentations

While only ranking officials and their wives have been invited to meet the royal couple on the portico when they arrive, many of those "tapped" for presentation later will be residential Washingtonians of no official rank.

All persons "tapped" will be chosen by the Brtish Ambassador or Lady Lindsay, or members of the Embassy staff while the royal couple make their tours of the garden.

Guests upon arrival at the British Embassy may enter the garden either through the gate, or by the way of the house, provided they get there before 4:40 o'clock. (The door will be open at 4 o'clock).

Although several persons originally invited to the Brtish Embassy dinner Friday night have declined (notably, the Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes, because of the former's illness), substitutes have already been made, and the number still remains 36, counting the King and Queen and President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Kinds of Wine For King Here Kept Secret

Roosevelt Points Out He's Not Advertising Brands or Valleys

President Roosevelt refused point-blank yesterday to say whether imported or domestic wines, or what kinds would be served by the White House during the stay of King George and Queen Elizabeth.

He said, in response to questions at his press conference, that he was not advertising any brands or valleys noted for their choice grapes.

An enlarged kitchen staff hurried with the preparation of food to be served during the royal visit. Vegetables arrived yesterday and the meats will be delivered today.

Trucks will bring in rolls, ice cream and cakes tomorrow, just before the King and Queen sit down to the table.

Beets, celery and sweet potatoes are to be prepared. Cranberry jelly has arrived, and ingredients for soup.

Smithsonian Hangs Pictures Of Three Kings

The Smithsonian Institution, founded by a Briton, yesterday began doing its bit toward the welcome of Their Majesties.

It placed on exhibition three widely known oil paintings. One is a portrait of the late King George V, father of the present monarch; another depicts the Prince of Wales (later King Edward VII) and President James Buchanan at the tomb of George Washington in 1860, and the third is of King Edward VII.

The portrait of King George V was presented to the American people, through President Roosevelt, several years ago by the painter, Frank O. Salisbury, an Englishman. Thomas P. Rossiter, an American, painted the Mount Vernon scene, and the portrait of King Edward VII is by Sir John Watson Gordon, of Edinburgh.

Why Have You Waited So Long?

NEARLY EVERY DAY I am consulted by some man who hopes to regrow lost hair. In ten years of experience I have yet to find a dependable means of regrowing hair on a bald pate. My message is not directed to bald-headed men. My services are offered to the thinking individual who has hair and wishes to prevent its loss. Nearly any man can prevent baldness by reasonable and sensible care. The tragedy is their failure to start in time. It is unusual to have a healthy head of hair in a dandruff-laden, itchy scalp . . . and it will not long continue to be healthy under such conditions.

EXAMINATION without charge. If I can help, I tell you: if not, treatment is not recommended. You should call today and learn the caution to be exercised concerning the bad effect of too much sun and salt water on the hair. Phone NAtional 6081.

Royal Train Points Toward Washington

King and Queen To Ride Separately For First Time Here

hearty breakfast. He eats lightly at the next two meals.

His Majesty obviously does not like stuffed shirts. He is happiest when he is around children and war veterans. He is fascinated by war medals, and has broken up a dozen schedules by talking to Victoria Cross men and other veterans.

A Veteran Himself

He is a veteran himself, having served in a gun turret at the Battle of Jutland. They say that he picked up more than naval lore, and that he is a good "cusser."

The King, they say, does not carry around any money. It happens that his credit is very good. His Majesty is a camera fiend, using both movie and still cameras.

Two things have happened to him since he arrived on the Empress of Australia at Quebec. He seems less nervous, more self-assured, and his tan is beginning to wear away.

He is very much in love with Queen Elizabeth. This lovely woman, as has probably been noted a thousand times before, is going to prove the biggest shock—shock, that is, in the sense that she is so much an improvement on her photographs. She is Scotch but might be taken for Irish and, like the heroine of "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," sure, she'll steal your heart away.

Her Majesty is more slender than her photographs would indicate. But the most striking thing about her, something that was noted even when she was high up on the promenade deck of the Empress of Australia at Quebec, is her rich coloring, heightened by her gay, blue eyes.

She looks you directly in the eye when she takes your hand, and she appears to be interested in everything. By this time, it is certainly no surprise to her when a little girl dressed in a long court gown comes up, curtsies and hands her a bouquet of roses. The Queen must have received 500 bouquets since she started out on this royal tour. However, whenever it happens—and it happens at every stop—she wears a look of pleased surprise which makes the donor think it is the very first bouquet Her Majesty ever has received.

The Queen brought along a fortune in jewels. Her favorite is a triple strand of pearls. Each is about the size of a boy's marble.

They say that she never makes up her mind which of her 50 gowns or ensembles she is going to wear until the last moment, and that the same goes for her jewelry. The girls say that in Montreal she stopped on the way to a banquet and changed tiaras, of which she has several.

Queen Is Thoughtful

The Queen drinks a little but does not smoke, which has made it difficult for cigarette-smoking dowagers and debutantes all the way across Canada. As the Queen did not light up when the demi-tasse arrived, they, too, had to refrain.

The Queen is a thoughtful woman. In Quebec she gave a thoughtful telephone girl a royal brooch and she has left a trail of little mementoes behind her ever since. The King also has been doing this.

The British sovereigns have been together ever since they arrived in the New World. There have been no "lodge nights" for the King, no bull sessions with the men.

In Washington, something will happen to the King and Queen that has not happened since they arrived in Canada. Always up here they have ridden together through the crowd-packed streets.

In Washington they will be separated, the King to ride on Pennsylvania Avenue with President Roosevelt and the Queen with Mrs. Roosevelt.

There are about 160 persons on the royal train and 114 on the royal pilot train. Their Majesties' party and staff is not large, not as large, in fact as the aforementioned Earl Li Hung's. But those required to serve them indirectly run into hundreds.

Those "in attendance" upon the King and Queen are:

Ladies-in-waiting — Lady Nun Burnholme, Lady Katherine Seymore.

Lord-in-waiting to the King—The Earl of Eldon. Lord Chamberlain to the Queen—the Earl of Airlie.

Medical officer—Surgeon Capt. H. White, R. N.

Chief press officer—George F. Steward.

Assistant private secretary to the King—Capt. M. Adriane.

Equerries to the King—Lieut. Col. Piers Legh, C. M. G., C. I. E., C. V. O., O. B. E., and Commander E. M. C. Abel Smith, R. N.

Comptroller of the household—Lieut. Col. E. D. Mackenzie, C.M. G., D.S.O., who was assigned to the party at Ottawa.

Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, of Canada.

Canning Relieved

Then comes what is listed as the staff. This is headed by the name of Chief Constable Albert Canning, of Scotland Yard, an alert partly-bald 6-footer who today was vastly relieved when he heard that Sean Russell, reputed leader of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, had been arrested in Detroit.

"I heard he had crossed the Atlantic about the same time Their Majesties did," Canning said today, "and I asked the authorities to arrest him."

"Are you apprehensive about the visit of the King and Queen to Washington?" Canning was asked.

"Not now," he said.

The King's "police officer" is Chief Inspector H. Cameron and the Queen's is Sub-divisional Inspector J. Giles. After them are listed the servants, and with "Mr." "Mrs." or "Miss" before their names on the official list.

The Queen has two dressers, Miss Catherine MacLean and Miss Christina Willox. She also has a hairdresser, Frank Powell.

Sergeant Footman Watts handles the royal baggage, about 300 pieces in all. The Queen has trunks 5 feet 6 inches high, so that her gowns may hang without wrinkling.

Incidentally, there are no names on the luggage of the royal couple. The trunks and bags are marked simply, "The King" and "The Queen."

Two of the footmen always serve the King and Queen at outside banquets. They wear red coats and give a Buckingham Palace touch to every feast Their Majesties attend.

King Acquires Barber

The King did not bring along his palace barber, but he has one now—a very distinguished looking French-Canadian named P. O. Tasse, who ordinarily wields his scissors at the Chateau Laurier in Ottawa. He cuts the King's hair about once a week. The Chateau Laurier also provided the royal pair with a chef, J. F. Morgan, and a steward, W. Notley.

There are a raft of others on the royal train, one of the most important of whom is Gustave Lanctot, Esq., K. C., D. Litt, L. L. D., who is archivist of the Dominion of Canada and has been assigned as "historian of the royal tour." He has been a busy fellow.

Also on the royal train are three telephone experts, one of whose jobs has been to put through calls right from car No. 1 so that the King and Queen could talk to Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose in London.

Then there are the Canadian mounties, who, unfortunately drop out at the border tomorrow; railroad officials and the chemist who inspects all the food that goes to Their Majesties' table.

Colorful Train

The train itself is the fulfillment of a railroad man's dream, and it is too bad that it can't run right up Pennsylvania avenue for the crowd that will turn out for Thursday's show.

The locomotives—six of them take turns in hauling the train—are painted blue and trimmed with silver and gold. The coaches are painted in like hues and have roofs of gunmetal topping the royal blue. The royal coat of arms decorates the two cars used by the King and Queen; the others bear the royal cipher and crown.

Of the two cars set apart for the King and Queen, one is fitted as a private apartment for Their Majesties, with bedrooms and dressing rooms. There are sitting rooms for the royal couple and a suite for the staff.

Another car contains the dining room and kitchen, a lounge and the official drawing room. In one of the baggage cars is a large supply of water which was brought over from Malvern Springs in England.

The pilot train, which precedes the royal train, has on board 58 newspapermen (American, English, Canadian, Australian and French), 12 photographers, 7 radio men, the three Canadian postoffice men (they handled 300,000 pieces so far), telegraph men, police officials and others.

Although three weeks have passed, all on board are still speaking.

The colored porters on the pilot train apparently are followers of Father Divine.

"Peace," one will say when he passes another.

"Peace, it's wonderful," will be the reply.

Princess Fined As Tipsy Driver

PRINCESS KATE FAZIL, American-born wife of Prince Ibrahim Fazil of Egypt, was fined $125 yesterday in London on a drunken driving charge. The court heard testimony that she had embarrassed a police doctor with remarks like "don't kiss me too much" and "pat me on the cheek" to preserve order and left with an air of disappointment.

Prior to this outburst the following developments had occurred in the milk inquiry:

The case of Whiting Faulkner, Martinsburg (W. Va.) postmaster, was presented to the grand jury.

Estil W. Smith, accountant of the Bates subcommittee, testified that the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy had recorded the purchase of thousands of dollars worth of eggs and butter which he said had not been bought and that its officials kept a secret bank account in Chicago.

Schulte announced that James T. Ward, president of the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy, had told him he would cut the retail price of milk in Washington to 12 cents "as soon as my bill becomes a law."

The frayed nerves of members of the sub-committee indicated another bitter fight when the House District Committee meets tomorrow morning in a special session to act on the Schulte bill in time to place it on the House calendar for action next Monday, District day.

The Schulte bill, opposed by the District Health Department, has the support of Congressmen from the Western dairy States. It proposes to amend the District milk act to permit the importation of cream for fluid sale from any farm in the United States that can show proof of local inspection.

Sub-committee members, obviously smarting under the public resentment which greeted their order for closed doors in connection with the testimony of the accountant, held hurried conferences during the morning before rescinding the ruling. Bates explained that he had opposed the "gag" rule when it was adopted Monday in executive session.

The Faulkner case was presented to the District grand jury by Jack Fihelly, assistant United States attorney. While some indictments are to be reported today, it was not expected that the grand jury would report on the Faulkner case before June 14, its next day for reporting to the United States District Court.

Among the witnesses heard were Burroughs, Derrick and Adam Giebel, clerk in the corporation counsel's office.

preserve the peace of the United States, or to protect the lives of citizens of the United States.

Empowering the President to establish combat areas in which American travel would be restricted, and dropping entirely the mandatory arms embargo, the bill conforms to Secretary Hull's recommendations on these points.

Purchasers to Assume Title

As under the Pittman bill in the Senate, arms and other commodities would be sold to belligerents, provided foreign purchasers assumed title to goods before they left this country and shipments were made in foreign vessels. American shipowners would be subject to penalty as law violators if they moved through combat zones.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee began marking up its draft of the bill Monday, with R. Walton Moore, counselor of the State Department, and other department aides sitting in at committee request. The State Department officials left the room during the actual voting yesterday after Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, raised the point that the committee was in executive session.

Welles Urges Revision

New York, June 6 (AP).—Undersecretary of State Welles urged today a revision of this country's "so-called neutrality" law, which, "while keeping wholly within the pale of neutrality," would "make sure that such purely domestic legislation does not constitute an encouragement, and even an assistance, to the proponents of military conquest in other parts of the world."

At the same time, he said in an address at the commencement day luncheon of the Alumni Federation of Columbia University, the amended legislation should "insure, so far as that can be done by law, our keeping out of a war not of our own making."

Lock Maker Admits Using Labor Spies

Yale & Towne Chief Declares Company 'Wanted to Find Out'

By the Associated Press.

Shortly after John L. Lewis had urged Congress to outlaw use of spies, guards and munitions in industrial disputes, a manager of a large Eastern manufacturing plant told a Senate Labor sub-committee yesterday that he believed it necessary to employ "labor spies."

Richard G. Plumley, general manager of the Stamford, Conn., plant of the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Co., asserted that "it is sometimes necessary to get to the bottom of undercover matters."

The factory manager had concluded a long statement urging amendment of the labor act when Chairman Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, reading from records of the Senate civil liberties investigation, asked whether the Yale & Towne Co. was affiliated with the National Metal Trades Association.

Admits Calling for Spies

"Do you know this is a strike-breaking association that has maintained a war chest of $250,000 to send spies and strikebreakers into plants?" Thomas demanded.

Plumley replied in the affirmative and added that he had "asked for one or two of these spies or investigators once in awhile."

"Is it not a fact that Yale & Towne used spies in 1934 and 1935 and that these spies reported directly to you?" Thomas asked, adding that the spies were Max Lischick and August Tharin, the latter employed "under the alias of Paul Miller."

Plumley asserted that "so-called spies" were hired after "we heard the Communist Party was trying to organize to seize plants in some bolshevik uprising."

"Wanted to Find Out"

"We wanted to find out what was going on," he added.

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, who has urged amendments to the labor act, took up questioning of Plumley, to bring out that Yale and Towne had been in business for 70 years and enjoyed peaceful labor relations much of that time.

"What is the spirit between management and employes," Burke asked.

"It's just a friendly family spirit," Plumley replied. "We have outings, picnics, smokers and bowling matches."

Lewis' Testimony

Lewis testified before another Senate labor sub-committee considering a bill which developed from the Civil Liberties hearings and which would prohibit "oppressive labor practices." He said a West Virginia coal operator recently boasted in a Washington hotel before Congressmen "that his corporation had five machine guns, rifles, ammunition and nauseating gas, and that he expected to use those to shoot himself some miners in the month of May."

"A ghastly contribution," Lewis commented.

In addition to outlawing labor spies and industrial munitions, Lewis urged that Congress Bar Federal contracts, loans or subsidies to any business concern violating labor statutes.

Allen, Kennedy Disagree on Reorganization

Commissioner Allen and Chairman Kennedy of the House sub-committee on District reorganization differ on five points of the proposed revamping of the District government, it was learned yesterday.

Following a conference between the two, it was revealed the points of difference are:

Establishment of a five-man board of commissioners.

A proposal to abolish the Public Utilities Commission.

A proposal to create a department of labor.

Abolition of the present Board of Education.

Abolition of the present board of trustees.

The Commissioner said he was confident the differences "could be ironed out." He said he would meet with Kennedy shortly to consider the proposed reorganization, as contained in the bill before his subcommittee.

Most of the oppostion to the Griffenhagen report on the local government was directed at the proposals to abolish the present school and library set-ups, as well as the Commissioner form of government.

President Roosevelt brought Allen back to service to reorganize the local government.

You Can't Park Here:

$2 Fine Gladly Paid For 41 Days Parking

Truck (X) double-parked outside District Building, as No Parking signs (arrows) reserve valuable curb space for what?

This is the third in a series of articles dealing with the parking problem in Washington.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Take the case of a typical motorist driven to desperation by endless days of 'round-the-block-and-back-again searches for a place to park his car.

For 41 days he defied the law—not because he wanted to, but because he had no other choice. For 41 days he parked his car illegally, and the police didn't even give it a second glance—until the forty-first day.

This motorist conducted a parking experiment all his own. Religiously every day he spent an hour canvassing parking lots, garages and crowded streets in the business area. "We're filled up" was the answer he got at the parking lots and garages. He had no luck in getting spaces on the street. So, carefully avoiding fire plugs, entrances and crosswalks, he left his car in some restricted zone each day.

Charged With Overtime Parking

Sometimes he picked one-hour zones; sometimes he parked less than the 50-foot prescribed distance from intersections; sometimes he stopped in "no parking anytime" areas, and on several occasions he used the so-called "official" zones. His car remained parked from midmorning until late in the evening—without as much as a tire mark by the police.

But on the forty-first day, this motorist received a "ticket." It charged him with overtime parking, the collateral being $2. Thus, for 41 days he parked at an average cost of a little better than 5 cents a day.

His case is just one of hundreds like it all over the city six days a week. The fact can't be ignored that Washington's vastly inadequate downtown parking facilities are breeding a contempt for all regulations.

One has but to walk through a few alleys in the business district to see this is true. Day after day, alleyways throughout the congested area are jammed with parked cars—despite an ample sprinkling of "no parking" signs.

Parked Cars Untouched

In one recent instance, police were called to one of the larger downtown alleys to disperse a "craps game." The police car couldn't get into the alley because of double and triple parked cars. The "craps game," however, was dispersed. The parked cars were not touched. Even the police, apparently, have come to realize the plight of desperate motorists.

Some car owners have developed a system of beating the law, which, from all indications, is rapidly gaining favor. They hire "car movers" and "cop watchers" to keep them out of trouble. The streets are filled with unemployed, who grab at the chance of earning a few cents, and as a result, a minor "racket" has sprung up.

These "car movers" sometimes have as many as a dozen "clients." Their job goes something like this: They keep a weather eye open for policemen detailed to issue tickets. In some cases, the "clients" are notified and move their own cars. In others, the hired watcher does the work. Working together in one-hour parking zones, the movers switch cars from place to place—sometimes only a step ahead of the police.

New Parking Rules Listed For 21 Streets

Queer Taste in D.C. Water Explained

A heavy taste of chlorine, noted yesterday in Washington's drinking water, the Water Department's chief chemist, C. J. Lauter, explained, was due to work being carried on at the McMillan reservoir.

Yesterday's dose, which made downtown water taste as a hospital smells, was due to a "slip-up somewhere" and will be dissipated within 12 hours, he promised.

House Bloc Opens Drive to Hike Pensions

Coalition Seeks to Put Larger Share of Age Benefits on U. S.

By International News Service.

A coalition of Southern and Western Democrats and Northern Republicans yesterday opened a determined drive to boost old-age pensions in "poorer" States as the House began battling over the Administration social security revision bill.

The bill, estimated to save employers and employes $1,710,000,000 in the next three years, and to increase benefits to $1,755,000,000 in the next five years, weathered its first test as the House adopted, by voice vote, a rule throwing it open to amendment and limiting debate to 8 hours.

The coalition immediately gained the support of nearly 100 Townsendites, defeated three-to-one last week on their $200-a-month old-age pension plan.

Close Showdown Expected

Democratic leaders frankly conceded that, despite liberalization of the social security act, the showdown on whether the Federal Government will be forced to contribute a larger share of the old-age pension funds would be close.

Southern Democrats and Northern Republicans served notice they would offer amendments requiring the Federal Government to bear as high as three-fourths of the cost of old-age pensions against the States' one-fourth.

They also announced they would seek to write an amendment into the law forcing the Federal Government to pay a flat $10-a-month to earn aged needy person, and then have it contribute dollar-for-dollar to match State funds.

Tennessean's Proposal

Representative Taylor (Republican), of Tennessee, proposed the Federal Government pay $25 and States $15 of the proposed maximum $40-a-month pension, as against the Administration's proposal for each to contribute $20, contained in the bill.

"Under the bill reported by the Ways and Means Committee," Taylor said, "the people who are most in need get nothing."

The bill's proposal to boost from $15 to $20 the Federal matching funds was described by Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, as "political trickery" because only California now matches the lower sum "and other States can't afford to do it."

"Poorer States," shouted Representative Colmer (Democrat), of Mississippi, "can't benefit by this." Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, said it would take more money to meet the committee's plan than his State raises for general revenue.

California Democrats, led by Representative Voorhis and Representatives Dempsey, of New Mexico, and O'Connor, of Montana, also Democrats, demanded bigger Federal contributions, in joining the Northern Republicans, headed by Representative Brewster, of Maine, a Townsendite.

Leading the Administration's fight, Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, of the Ways and Means Committee, told the House "Although we know that this program is not perfect, and, because of administrative difficulties, is not as inclusive as it should be, the plan does contain the broadest program for social security ever undertaken by any government."

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

SUMMER SWINGS IN: Outdoor breezes and air-cooled indoor breezes figure equally in a gaily promising summertime night spot picture. A flock of new summer places have opened, only three in-town places will be dark during the warm months.

If you've an urge for outdoor evening diversion, there's the Shoreham Terrace overlooking Rock Creek Park, also the Roger Smith Powhatan Roof Garden, 11 stories up in the air and always breeze-swept. Down on Connecticut Avenue you'll find L'Escargot Terrace where you may dine in a replica of a Parisian sidewalk cafe. Down near the water front is Hall's outdoor garden, specializing in sea food.

Countryside dancing and dining, always refreshing, are at their best at Griffith Farms Tavern and Maryland Club Gardens. Both places are only a short drive from town, offer entertainment with a sparkle as well as tasty food.

Smartly air-cooled summer eves are being favored by many of our best people. Wardman's Metronome Room has been packed nightly since its recent redecoration in the Antarctic manner and the advent of the Penguins' band. Another popular spot is the Lounge Riviera, also especially dressed up for the summer with a cabana bandstand and Mediterranean murals.

Stepping out of the summer picture will be the Pirates' Den which closes next Saturday. Troika and Shar-Zad closed recently. All three will reopen around September 15.

ATTENTION, AUTOGRAPH HUNTERS: Movie star Bruce Cabot will be on the Roger Smith Powhatan Roof tonight. You'll certainly find him chatting with Singer Peggy Townsend.

ROYALTY'S ADVANCE GUARD: Those three Canadian veterans (part of the Britannic royal entourage) who so thoroughly enjoyed the singing of Mayfair's Leo and Louanna on Monday afternoon. When we left they were teaching Canadian war songs to L. and L.

CAPITOL ARRANGEMENTS: "Pally" Eaton, of the Rainbow Room Orchestra, has made a number of those clever arrangements you'll hear when Evelyn Tyner (wife of Manager Fordyce Minnick of 2400 Sixteenth Street) and Burrus Williams open their duo-piano act at the Capitol Theater on Friday.

COMES THE QUEEN: The Queen of the "Night of Thrills" Masonic pageant, and her court will be guests of honor at Bamboo Gardens this evening.

DON SHOOK, coleader with Carr Van Sickler, of the Madrillon orchestra

Every dance of Bamboo's new "Sugar Canes" is trimmed up with tricks. They do rope-skipping, use tablespoons as castanets and finally surprise you by using chop-sticks to drum on tin pans. P. S. Emcee Al Norton has a big new car in opalescent maroon. He's going to put a two-way transmitter in it so that he can chatter to his radio friends as he rolls along.

VERSATILITY, INCORPORATED: Johnny De Leon (Neptune Room) can play more instruments! Included are the saxophone, violin harmonica, drums, clarinet, bass, ukelele, guitar, mandolin and trumpet.

PICTURE TUNES: Singer Illis Deon (Hour Glass), who's warbled all over the world, says that European and Latin-American audiences prefer American songs, especially those from the motion pictures they've seen.

DOUBLE BIRTHDAY PARTY: That great big birthday party at the Lotus on Monday eve was a double event given in honor of Miss Teresa Mays ad Miss Frances Koran, both of the G. P. O., by their office associates.

"Penny Ford, of the Penguins, in Wardman's Metronome Room

Jay Jayson, star of Lotus' "Summertime Revue," has a brand new bunch of impersonations, all zippy.

SINGER-JOURNALIST: Thelma Mitchell, singing with Wally Stoefler's Orchestra at Glen Echo, says "I used to be a newspaper woman myself." Thelma was a high school journalist in Helena, Ark., crowned her career by winning a national essay competition.

WELL-KNOWN OSCAR: An Austrian friend of Oscar of the Hi Hat recently came to town. He'd lost Oscar's address. But when he attended a banquet on the evening of his arrival, the stranger he sat next to promptly told him just where to find Oscar.

ARTIST IN SUGAR: A handsomely tinted picture of the Eastern Star Home done entirely in sugar by Clement attracted much admiring attention at the Eastern Star party at Madrillon.

U. S. Exports To Argentina Cut by Half

Purchases to Brazil In April Well Over Same Month Last Year

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that United States merchandise sales to Argentina had fallen off by more than half so far this year, compared with the corresponding period of 1938.

At beginning of this year Argentina tightened up currency restrictions in an effort to make purchases from the United States and sales to the United States balance more nearly than in the past.

In April United States sales to Argentina totaled $4,068,000, compared with $9,466,000 in the same month last year. For the first four months of the year sales amounted to $16,530,000, compared with $33,847,000 for the similar period last year.

Argentina cut down particularly on purchases of American automobiles, but United States motor manufacturers indicated recently they might buy large blocks of Argentine bonds in order to lift some of the restrictions.

Meanwhile, Brazil, which recently negotiated large credits with the Export-Import Bank here, increased its purchases from $5,428,000 in April, 1938, to $6,007,000 in the same month this year and raised its purchases for the first four months of the year from $21,052,000 last year to $22,757,000.

Germany, which the Department previously reported had sold an unusual amount of goods in this country in April in an effort to beat the deadline of April 28, when the United States put an extra 25 percent tariff on German goods, simultaneously curtailed purchases in this country.

United States sales to Germany in April were only $4,806,000, compared with $9,548,000 in the same month last year. German sales here in that month totalled $13,829,000, or more than three times those of the comparable month last year.

Although United States exports in April generally were somewhat below those of the same month last year, increases were reported in sales to France, Mexico, the central American countries, Denmark, Switzerland, the Philippine Islands and China.

New Palm Named Rooseveltia Frankliniana

Rooseveltia Frankliniana — the world's largest and most beautiful mountain palm tree—has recently been discovered by Smithsonian Institution botanists on uninhabited Cocos Island, hitherto known only as the resort of pirates, and hunters of buried treasure.

Announcement was made yesterday by the institution of this "notable botanical discovery," made by Dr. Waldo L. Schmitt. The island is about 250 miles southwest of Panama. Dr. Schmitt was one of the President's party on his visit to the Galapagos Islands last year, when three fish were also named for Mr. Roosevelt.

A number of seedlings of the new palm have been raised in the Department of Agriculture greenhouses and will be presented to President Roosevelt by Dr. Schmitt as a memento of the trip.

The palm Rooseveltia is a new genus, of which Frankliniana is only one species. As other palms of the same family are discovered, all will bear the name Rooseveltia.

Roosevelt Lauds High Court Ruling On Jersey City

President Roosevelt asserted at a press conference yesterday that he thought the Supreme Court decision holding unconstitutional a Jersey City ordinance used against C. I. O. mass meetings would strengthen civil rights generally.

Jersey City, June 6 (AP).—The American Civil Liberties Union and its allies today canceled plans to hold a rally Friday night in Journal Square in view of the fact Mayor Hague previously had scheduled a mass meeting there in his campaign for legalization of horse race betting.

A. C. L. U. headquarters in New York said its meeting probably would be held at Journal Square Monday or Tuesday night.

Flames Level Two Cottages At North Beach

A fire which raged an hour, leveling two summer cottages at North Beach, Md., and scorching a third, was brought under control last night after it had done damage estimated at $5,000.

The blaze began, authorities said, with an explosion in a house owned by William J. DuBusky, a policeman attached to the Third Precinct. Demolishing the home, fire swept on to the cottage of James Wesley a Government Printing Office employe. The third house, belonging to Acting Sergt. Robert L. Leach, of the Seventh Precinct, was scorched.

None of the houses, on Ninth street between Dayton and Erie streets, had been opened for the summer.

Silver Steel Halts Sea Corrosion

New York, June 6 (AP).—Silver steel, a stainless alloy which resists sea water corrosion, was announced today by the Chemical Foundation.

The new alloy is made by adding silver, never more than 2 per cent and frequently less than 1, to stainless steels that contain chromium and nickel. It was developed at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK!

HERE is today's big news for smokers who want the most for their money in smoking pleasure at its best. Read the convincing comparisons made between cigarettes by a group of prominent scientists. In a leading laboratory, 16 of the largest-selling cigarette brands were tested impartially with these results:

1 Camels were found to contain MORE TOBACCO BY WEIGHT than the average for the 15 other of the largest-selling brands.

2 CAMELS BURNED SLOWER THAN ANY OTHER BRAND TESTED 25% SLOWER THAN THE AVERAGE TIME OF THE 15 OTHER OF THE LARGEST-SELLING BRANDS! By burning 25% slower, on the average, Camels give smokers the equivalent of 5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK!

3 In the same tests, CAMELS HELD THEIR ASH FAR LONGER than the average time for all the other brands.

Right now is an ideal time to switch to Camels—AT THE START OF THE SUMMER SEASON, when you're apt to be smoking more. Camel certainly is the cigarette for steady smoking. You'll appreciate its COOLNESS, its COSTLIER TOBACCOS that cost so little per smoke! See how much longer you can enjoy a slow-burning Camel. Note the striking difference in Camel's milder, more delicate taste and fragrance. Try Camels now—America's luxury smoke that every smoker can afford!

Smoking is Believing!

900 Seek Bds To Dinner in Hazen's Honor

Committee to Make Every Effort to Seat Such a Large Number

The Melvin Colvin Hazen testimonial dinner committee is wondering how to accommodate all those who have expressed their desire to do honor to Commissioner Hazen on the completion of his half-century of service to the District government.

At a meeting of the general committee and sponsors in the Mayflower yesterday afternoon, it was reported by Marcy L. Sperry, vice chairman of the ticket committee, that 900 tickets could be disposed of now for the dinner on June 28, but accommodations can be provided comfortably in the Mayflower ballroom for only 850.

Every effort will be made, according to Lawrence E. Williams, chairman, to accommodate those who desire to attend.

The general committee adjourned to meet again on June 14, and the program committee under John Saul had a short meeting to discuss how many would be invited to make three minutes' talk on the occasion of the dinner.

Accommodation Problem Faces Hazen Dinner Planners

Escorts Can't Be Furnished To Ladies by Mail, Judge Rules

Operators of Agency Catering To Lonely Women Fined $250,. Just After Opening of New York Fair

By the United Press.

New York, June 6.—Ted Peckham, who for four years has been selling the after-dark services of handsome males to lonely ladies of wealth, saw his profitable business go bust in court today just as he was getting ready for the World's Fair trade.

Justice William R. Bayes found him guilty of operating a mail "employment agency" without a license, fined him $250, suspended a three-month's workhouse sentence and ordered him to discontinue supplying handsome escorts to women until he gets a license.

Peckham, who looks like a blond beanpole in flannels, did not think much of his chances for getting a license after he saw License Commissioner Paul Moss set a new eyebrow altitude record in denouncing agencies like Pekham's Guide Escort Service, Inc., as "a menace to the city and to visitors."

"For the last four years we have been trying to stamp out this serious evil," Moss said. "They send out escorts without first investigating the escorts, and with women who also have not been investigated.

"Women who are overcharged by them are afraid to go to court because of the publicity.

"I recommend that this man be punished for conducting an illegal business in New York for the past four years."

The mother of the 24-year-old Peckham heard the sentence under the misapprehension that her son was being sent to jail. She pounded furiously on the bench in front of her until she was reassured. Peckham's eyes filled with tears as he watched her.

Two of Peckham's former escorts testified against him.

1 Killed, 2 Injured In Accidents at Building Sites

One workman was killed and two were injured yesterday in accidents on building sites.

Harvey T. Peck, 32-year-old steel worker, toppled 40 feet from a steel girder while working on the new Calvin Coolidge High School at Fifth and Sheridan streets northwest. He died in Emergency Hospital. His home was at 707 Twenty-second street northwest.

While painting in the 800 block Decatur street northwest, Neal O'Leary, 36, of Capitol Heights, Md., fell from a ladder. He received first aid at Emergency Hospital and was transfrred to Gallinger. Doctors said he might have a broken back.

Burt Wayne, 33, of 419 K street northwest, escaped with cuts and bruises after falling through a skylight at 724 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Two Found Slain, Arizona Fugitive Dead by Own Hand

Nogales, Ariz., June 6 (AP).—Two young Nogales men were slain today and their bodies stuffed in a culvert.

A youth, who fled with the sister of one of the victims, was found dead on a side road. The girl, Hortencia Gonzalez, 17, told Sheriff J. J. Lowe that the youth, Homer Adams, 22, committed suicide.

Officers studied the bizarre story of Hector Gonzalez, 18, that his brother, Antonio Gonzalez, jr., 20; his cousin, Eugene Adams, 19, and himself were lured one by one to a roadside scene and shot by Adams. Hector was wounded critically.

Vassar Professor Tells Students to Have 'Sense of Adventure'

Fifty-five seniors at Madeira School were told yesterday to go out into the world "with a sense of adventure" by Miss Helen Drusilla Lockwood, professor of English at Vassar College, at graduation exercises in the school's outdoor theater at Greenway, Fairfax County, Va.

"You have only to dare to keep on," said Miss Lockwood, reminding the girls that women "throughout the centuries have been the great civilizers." Preservation of human values, and of the sense of the dignity of every person must be the foundation of American culture as it matures, she declared.

Mrs. Lucy Madeira Wing, principal of the school, presented diplomas to the girls after Miss Lockwood's address. The Rev. H. H. D. Sterrett, rector of All Souls' Memorial Church, gave the invocation and benediction.

Briggs' Strike Conferees Agree On Settlement

Detroit, June 6 (U.P.).—Federal Labor Conciliator James F. Dewey tonight announced settlement of the Briggs Manufacturing Co. strike which has kept nearly 70,000 automobile workers idle for 15 days.

Dewey said that representatives of the company and the United Automobile Workers Union (C. I. O.) had concurred in the agreement and that it would be signed tomorrow noon. Immediately afterward it will be presented to a union mass meeting for ratification.

If it is ratified, Dewey said, the eight Briggs plants probably will reopen Thursday, and the seven other automobile plants forced to close because of lack of supplies from Briggs will reopen as soon as possible, probably before the end of the week.

Why Let Yourself Get Constipated?

Why endure those dull headachy days due to constipation, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can avoid both by getting at the cause of the trouble?

If your constipation, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, the "better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran.

This crunchy toasted breakfast cereal is the ounce of prevention that's worth a pound of emergency relief. It helps you not only to get regular but to keep regular, day after day and month after month, by the pleasantest means you ever knew.

Eat Kellogg's All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Scarcely A Model

If Representative Nichols has heard no objections to the District tax bill he is sponsoring, it must be because he has not kept his ear to the ground. District citizens who will have to pay the taxes see many weaknesses in the bill. As the outcome of a move to give the District a model tax system, it certainly leaves much to be desired.

There are a number of commendable features in this latest District tax measure. It would permit reduction of the levy on real estate and wipe out the unsound tax on intangible personal property. Enactment of the bill, including these improvements, would doubtless give Washington a more satisfactory revenue system than it now has.

Yet the measure also carries a number of keen disappointments for local taxpayers. Foremost among these is the continuation of the business-privilege tax, which is a disguised and inequitable sales tax. The House sub-committee has agreed upon the principle of a local income tax, but the restriction of that levy to salaries over $10,000 very notably reduces the amount of revenue that may be anticipated from this source. This limitation, plus the extension of the emergency tax on the gross receipts of business and professional men, suggests that the District's revenue system is once more being patched up instead of being constructively overhauled.

We are again confronted by the fact that it is extremely difficult for Congress to adopt a modern tax system for the District. The Nichols bill, as it now stands, is as much designed to avoid personal and political objections of Congressmen as to equalize the tax burden on local citizens. The primary purpose of the survey undertaken last year was to set up a new revenue system, but proposed reforms have been gradually whittled away until Mr. Nichols' bill is now just another expedient tax measure.

No tears will be shed, therefore, if the bill is dropped by the House in favor of the increased Federal payment to the District voted by the Senate. Such action would certainly help to balance the scales as between local and national responsibility for the Capital's expenses. Elimination of previous cuts in the Federal payment are long overdue. In these circumstances the most ardent promoters of local tax reforms may see advantages in acceptance of the Federal payment adopted by the Senate and postponement of tax revision until next year.

Baltimore's Two Surveys

The Carnegie Corporation has given $172,100 to promote among the inhabitants of Baltimore a warmer appreciation of music and the fine arts.

Under a plan prepared, after two years' study by Mayor Jackson's committee on art education, and approved by Dr. F. P. Keppel, president of the Carnegie Corporation, the money is to be apportioned in varying amounts among the Johns Hopkins University, Goucher College, the Peabody Institute, the Maryland Institute and the public schools. Most of it will be spent over a period of three years, to establish new public art courses, to provide scholarships for persons of talent and to provide better training for art and music teachers.

It is notable encouragement for what are sometimes wistfully called the higher values of life. And, no doubt, it is also an indication that the private foundations have been moved to a little jealousy, and perhaps some alarm, by the publicity and eclat that have attended the Federal Government's wholesale patronage in the same general field. The Carnegie Corporation evidently believes that, in Baltimore at least, there are still talents as yet undisclosed by such agencies as the Federal Arts Projects and the Treasury's Division of Fine Arts. One obvious retort to critics of Governmental incursions in cultural development is that private philanthropy has for the most part neglected its opportunities here.

The Baltimore experiment, therefore, will be watched with much interest. That city offers an admirable testing ground for the program which the Carnegie Corporation has agreed to finance. It would be unfair to suggest that the donation is going where the need for it is greatest. But certainly Baltimoreans, by and large, have hitherto not been conspicuous for overwhelming esthetic passion.

Like many other American cities, Baltimore has been more preoccupied with material than spiritual expansion. And the survey that reveals the shortcomings of Baltimore's musical and art education facilities coincides neatly with another showing how the value of the city's manufactures has risen 211 per cent in 30 years. Baltimore, we learn, now leads the world in the production of tin containers, fertilizers and bottle caps.

As a result of the Carnegie Corporation grant Baltimore may now begin to step up production in less readily tabulated commodities. It may be hoped that this will be the case. The business survey points out that the city is not "dominated by any single group of industries." The cultural survey may result in strivings which will save Baltimore from being "dominated" by industry at all.

Tragic Era Strategy

Every point in the Supreme Court's two decisions affecting the proposed child labor amendment tends to facilitate changes in the Constitution.

The court refused to assume the responsibility of placing any limit on the time during which any amendment may be ratified, although it indicated that Congress may decide when an unratified amendment loses its virility through lapse of time. Under this decision the States seem to be free to ratify the child labor amendment at any time, regardless of whether or not they have previously rejected it. And if any State attempts to withdraw a previous ratification, Congress may decide to ignore that action.

To some extent, therefore, the opinion smooths the path of the proposed child labor amendment. In recent years 11 States have altered their position on the amendment from disapproval to positive indorsement. All of these States may now be counted in the ratifying group. Even so, the number of States favoring the amendment stands at 28.

No addition was made to this number in either 1938 or during the current year. Since affirmative action by 36 States is required to make the amendment effective, the most expeditious course might still be the adoption of a new resolution that would eliminate the weaknesses of the proposal laid before the States in 1924.

The significance of the opinion handed down on Monday, however, extends far beyond the child labor amendment. It lays down principles that may be of great importance in amending the Constitution at some future date. In so far as it facilitates changes in the Constitution its effect will be welcomed. Yet it is amazing to have the court base this liberal conclusion upon the discredited procedure by which the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted.

The Fourteenth Amendment, as Chief Justice Hughes notes in his opinion, was rejected by Georgia, North and South Carolina in 1866. New governments, erected in those States under direction of Congress during the disgraceful reconstruction era, later ratified the proposed amendment. In the meantime, however, Ohio and New Jersey withdrew their previous approval.

Despite these circumstances, fully explained to Congress by Secretary of State Seward, that body adopted a resolution declaring the Fourteenth Amendment to be in effect. Obviously this amendment was railroaded through. Among the "three-fourths of the States" supposed to have ratified it were three whose will had been thwarted by Congress and two others which had rescinded their previous approval.

The Supreme Court has now accepted as a precedent this highly dubious decision "by the political departments of the Government." The court goes on to express a majority conviction that "the efficacy of ratifications by State legislatures, in the light of previous rejection or attempted withdrawal, should be regarded as a political question pertaining to the political department . . ." In other words, Congress may say when a State has properly ratified a proposed constitutional amendment; and if Congress doesn't like the response of any group of States it might, conceivably, by resort to "tragic era" tactics, set up in those States puppet governments that will follow the lead of Washington.

By these methods Congress could, in an emergency, coerce the States into adoption of almost any amendment to the Constitution it might approve. The court must have foreseen that possibility, for its decision is based on a precedent in which this dangerous procedure was actually used. It is difficult to avoid the conclusion that in thus leaving to Congress the decision as to when a State has properly ratified an amendment, the court has sidestepped a vital responsibility to preserve the orderly procedure which the Constitution prescribes for effecting changes in its provisions.

By its very nature Congress is incapable of making a fair and unbiased decision as to the validity of State action on constitutional issues. It does not seem reasonable that the founding fathers would have expected the body which proposes constitutional amendments also to sit in judgment as to the efficacy of a State's acceptance or rejection. Nor is it logical to permit State legislatures to change their action from negative to affirmative but not from affirmative to negative during the period when a constitutional change is an active issue. Especially is that true when the period of ratification may extend over many years.

In smoothing the way for constitutional changes it is certainly undesirable to adopt procedures which might be used to undermine our system of government. The boost which the court has given the child labor amendment seems to be far less important than the implications arising from its approval of the inexcusable strategy used to bring about adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment.

What Sort Of Stimulus?

The very faint praise awarded the Mead bill by Marriner Eccles would seem to doom that particular lending project, so far as the present session of Congress is concerned. Hostility to the measure is bound to be increased by the testimony of the chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, to the effect that the provisions of the pending legislation are no more "liberal" or "helpful" than powers already possessed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

At first glance there might not seem to be much difference between the Mead bill, providing for RFC insurance of bank loans to small business, and Mr. Eccles' alternative proposal for an industrial loan corporation within the Federal Reserve System. But the difference in theory is enormous.

The Mead bill, based on the assumption that capital formation and use is now a direct governmental function, is strongly socialistic. Mr. Eccles' objective seems rather to be additional stimulus for private credit, the sources of which the Mead bill might further tend to atrophy.

In his testimony before the Senate banking committee Mr. Eccles warned that new lending mechanisms will not of themselves bring any substantial recovery movement. The implication was that they may, rather, lead to steadily increasing governmental control over the economic machinery.

There are signs that this machinery will again function effectively if only the huge supplies of idle capital can be set to work. Mr. Eccles does not attempt to deny that encouragement to this end is desirable. But he significantly fails to indorse the totalitarian device of direct governmental lending and the controls which necessarily accompany it.

Establishing Tradition

Unprecedented honors have everywhere been bestowed on King George and Queen Elizabeth. But tomorrow, in Washington, they will receive a tribute of which they will probably be totally unaware. Proceeding from the White House to the garden party at the British Embassy they will proceed the "wrong way" around the western arc of Dupont Circle. Heretofore this royal prerogative has been strictly limited to the street cars of the Capital Transit Company.

The King and Queen will not notice that they are going the wrong way around the circle because in England the wrong way is the right way and the right way is the left way. More simply, the rule of the road in Merrie England is to keep to the left. So for a minute or two, on Dupont Circle, George and Elizabeth will instinctively feel wholly and completely at home. And that is more than can be said for any motorist from Vermont or Texas who stumbles into its traffic ramifications.

A century hence, when street cars will undoubtedly be going the wrong way round Dupont Circle, a very pretty legend will perhaps be attached thereto. It may be said, by the Cave Dwellers of that day, that the strange custom originated when British royalty visited Washington. To keep the memory of the occasion green, street cars were in perpetuity granted right to turn left around the circle. And what is now a ghastly nuisance will then, in 2039, be delicately sentimentalized into a tradition which not even a District Commissioner would wish to see changed.

In Cleveland it was learned that a voluntary fireman (who was paid so much for each fire he fought) was setting fire to buildings in order to provide work for himself. This just goes to show that we can lick unemployment if we set our heads to it.

Instead of delivering ice the other morning, a Bogota, N. J., iceman smashed windows of 34 of his customers and told them, "Run for your life—the world is coming to an end!" But he didn't tell them where to run.

After engaging in a war, it is usually necessary for a nation to grow another generation of soldiers before fighting again. Men who have been in a war never forget what a second lieutenant is like.

"A recent survey shows that college professors are not any better informed than average persons on subjects outside of their particular lines." It seems the only person around a college who knows everything is the sophomore.

The Strategic Moment

From Le Canard Enchaine, Paris; translated in Living Age.

Foreign observers here explain why the Duce decided on the occupation of Albania immediately after the birth of the heir apparent. The explanation is simple: in order to celebrate the birth of the royal infant, the Albanian authorities had 101 rounds fired, and the country was for the moment disarmed.

Community Chest

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Community Chest of Washington and of all other cities and towns where it exists deserves the unqualified support of every person who is employed and is self-supporting; especially is this true when one realizes the good that the Community Chest helps to accomplish in regard to an institution like St. Rose's Technical School at 2200 California street. I have had the pleasure and privilege of staying at this school as a boarder for some weeks and have had an opportunity to observe just how this institution is conducted and what class of girls are helped. There are 86 girls, Catholic and Protestant, under the care of ten Sisters of Charity of the Order of St. Vincent de Paul. These girls range in age from 14 to 18.

They are permitted to enter the institution only if their parents are in very moderate circumstances and unable to give them an education to fit them for a useful life. Many of the girls are orphans without homes or relatives. Those who have relatives in a position to contribute to the care and education of these girls do so, but many are unable to assume any financial responsibility, yet all are on the same parity.

The curriculum consists of academic and commercial courses. The pupils remain throughout the year, going during the summer months to Camp St. Rose, Mayo, Md., near Beverly Beach, a camp provided by the sisters for the recreation and health of these girls; of course, without extra expense.

When one realizes that this large institution is carried on by only ten sisters, who undertake to instruct and guide 86 girls of every nationality and of every kind of disposition without, seemingly on the surface, a ripple or a flaw, no sacrifice on the part of those who contribute through the Community Chest or otherwise, is too great. O. L. P. H.

Parking

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent your recent article on the parking problem: Why should the Government worker who receives an income of $4,000 and upward receive a free and reserved parking space while the great bulk of the employes who actually do the work of the Government have to pay to park or take a chance of a ticket?

The following proposal may sound ridiculous, I realize, but why not utilize, underground, the large open space of park fronting on Constitution avenue from Fifteenth to Seventeenth streets northwest?

Could there not be underground parking facilities constructed, in the area mentioned, using WPA labor, if necessary, with the idea in their design that they could be used as bomb shelters when needed? The surface could be resodded and the final appearance would be much as it is today.

The idea will be met with skepticism, but as a professional engineer I can see the attributes and also the difficulties.

For Co-operation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are present in America small groups which are trying in a way effectively and drastically to solve unemployment, social, divisions, etc. One group which aims at a disciplined solution of American issues is the communist group. Another group is the fascist leagues. For various reasons neither of these groups can be recommended as capable of giving a fair and beneficial solution to our problems. We want an honest, enlightened force which will promote the well-being of every citizen in America. We do not want to solve issues by raising prejudice or ill will.

The problem of the democracies is to secure as forceful a means of solving our hard problems as the dictatorships without using the methods the dictators employ. Voluntary co-operation on the part of everyone in a mutually agreed program is the closest we can achieve.

A Suitable Auditorium

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last February, when I came face to face with Washington's urgent need of a suitable auditorium capable of housing operatic, dramatic and concert performances, I pledged my co-operation in supplying the deficiency.

During the past few years, I have on a number of occasions stated that the time has come for Washington to become the center of our musical culture. The building of a suitable auditorium, with the most modern stage and equipment, constitutes the first step in that direction.

With my musical season over, I am now devoting my entire time and energy toward laying the groundwork for a Nation-wide campaign. I have already received enthusiastic encouragement from important people residing in many parts of our country. I gather from their replies that everyone seems to feel that what the Nation's Capital needs is the concern of all of us, regardless of our permanent place of abode.

We have formed the National Liberty Auditorium Association. Every man and woman of our country is eligible for membership to help create in Washington a musical center. We are determined to build in Washington the "Liberty Auditorium" which is to be second to none in the world, and from the present status of being the only National Capital in the world without a suitable auditorium, Washington will soon emerge the possessor of the finest musical center in the world.

Someone recently remarked that Washington is filled with "transients." But even the "transients" have a keen interest in our National Capital, else they would not be there. Liberty Auditorium and the operatic, dramatic and concert performances which that will make possible will become an additional attraction to the tens of thousands of American tourists.

They will carry away to their native towns and States an inspiring impression which will possibly lead to many more cultural undertakings throughout the country. Our project, therefore, is expected to enrich the country as a whole.

Milk

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are hoping that some definite, tangible results favorable to the consumer will come out of the present investigation of the Washington milk business.

It seems that the farmer gets about 6 cents a quart for his milk and the consumer pays 14. It is certainly unreasonable that it should cost over 50 per cent to get the milk from the producer to the consumer, especially since the producer pays the transportation from the farm to the city.

The farmer could hardly produce milk for less than 6 cents per quart with the present high cost of farm labor and the expensive restrictions and sanitary equipment now imposed on him. It is only about 2 cents a quart more than he was paid for his milk 40 years ago, when a farm hand was paid 50 cents to 75 cents a day.

The dealers' organizations have piled up tremendous overhead expenses and our babies have to pay for it in reduced vitamins and poor nourishment. The price of one of the dealers' fancy trucks would pay for a farm or a herd of cattle and our babies must bear the expense.

There is a great effort being expended endeavoring to reduce taxes; that is the taxes on big business, the taxes on the millionaire and the million dollar corporations, the taxes on the Fords, the Vanderbilts, the duPonts and others, but there is nothing said about reducing the taxes of the farmers who pay a large per cent of our State and national revenue. There should be no tax on the production of milk for our babies.

Enough Taxes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of your correspondents complains of the accumulation of savings deposits. He regards this as an evil to be corrected by two methods, namely, the education of the people in favor of spending and the imposition of a tax on savings accounts.

Please let me remind your readers that, so far at least as the District of Columbia is concerned, there is here a tax on intangibles under which, after an exemption of $500, the balance of an account is subject to a tax that is equivalent, taking into consideration the low interest rates paid by the banks, to income taxes of approximately 20 and 45 per cent, according to the amount on deposit. These must certainly be considered as excessive taxes, especially as the normal Federal income tax is only 4 per cent.

I suggest that thousands of these savings depositors would have been on the relief rolls long before this had it not been for their habits of thrift and saving. It has been one of the great weaknesses of the New Deal that its urge has always been to spend, spend, and if you haven't the money, borrow it.

"Spotted Fever"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is one important point which might have been added to your recent editorial on "Spotted Fever." It is this: If a tick is attached to the body, do not pull it off, as you may leave its head in the flesh, and that will make a bad spot. Put a bit of soft vaseline or bacon grease on it, enough to get around the head, and that will suffocate it and the body will withdraw of his own accord, and drop off, or you can take him off.

I think I have drawn as many ticks for the Bureau of Entomology as any man, and have also been temporarily somewhat crippled by the bite of a small tick. Ticks are bad actors, and the Bureau of Entomology is doing good work in working to get rid of them, as well as other pests.

Other Royal Guests

FOUR REIGNING sovereigns visited Washington prior to the advent of George VI. The first was the Emperor of Japan, but he came by proxy. This event, one of the most colorful in the history of the White House, occurred in 1857.

Three ambassadors, accompanied by a retinue of 50, comprising officers from the Japanese army, overflowed the Willard, and on a day named by President Buchanan they marched to the Executive Mansion, carrying 15 boxes filled with presents for the "Emperor of the United States."

It soon became evident that even the steps taken following their entry into the White House had been carefully rehearsed, and that their addresses, read from parchment, had been prepared at court.

The ambassadors wore robes of silk with long, flowing sleeves. Two were in brilliant yellow and stood on either side of one clad in royal purple. The retainers occupied the hall and during the ceremonies in the East Room they executed various maneuvers, which by a stretch of the imagination, might be compared to the figures in an old-time quadrille.

At a signal, the ambassadors entered the room where the "Emperor of the United States" stood waiting to receive them. Three steps forward, then bows so deep that heads nearly touched the floor. Three steps further, then another three bows. Still another three steps and finally three more bows. Then the purple-clad ambassador announced, reading from parchment, that President Buchanan should consider himself in the presence of the great Tycoon.

This accomplished, the ambassadors retired to the hall, where their little army executed maneuvers which included feats of agility. It was interpreted that these acts signified the return of the ambassadors to Japan and another voyage back to the United States. Having arrived a second time, the ambassadors again entered the East Room, bowed as they had done before and the purple statesman now announced that they represented a nation, not the ruler.

A picturesque figure was President James Buchanan, who took part in this game of make-believe. Even his apparel attracted attention. The coat worn when he delivered his inaugural address was lined with black satin, the stitches so arranged as to represent the 31 States then in the Union. That evening he set the pace for gastronomic events in the Mansion. The chief table decoration was a pyramid of cake 4 feet high, ornamented with flags bearings arms of every State and Territory. Three thousand dollars was spent for wine alone and the food consisted of oysters, 400 gallons; chicken salad, 500 quarts; ice cream, 1,200 quarts; jellies, 500 quarts; saddles of mutton, 60; saddles of venison, 4; rounds of beef, 8; hams, 75; tongues, 125, and pastries of every description.

The second reigning sovereign (the first in the flesh) to visit the United States was Dom Pedro II, Emperor of Brazil, who arrived in 1876. A columnist, writing in a national weekly (Collier's), recently stated that only two rulers of nations had visited America. His attention being called to the error, he replied, by letter, not in the magazine, that his statement had been verified by the State Department. Therefore, as any encyclopedia will show, the United States State Department has lost track of one Emperor.

During a conversation with an American, who visited Rio de Janeiro in 1883, Dom Pedro, the last Emperor of Brazil, told of his visit to the White House and of being entertained by President Grant. He also spent much time at the Centennial Exposition, held that year in Philadelphia, where he was greatly impressed by the Corliss engine, a main attraction in the machinery building. "A Nation that can construct such a wonder," said the Emperor, "is bound to forge to the front in the march of progress."

Next of royal blood to visit the United States was Albert I, King of the Belgians. He made two visits, the first in 1918, the second in 1919. His host during the first visit was James J. Hill, the famous railroad builder, and in Mr. Hill's company King Albert inspected many thousand miles of railroad, also manufacturing plants. On the second visit, when formally received by President Wilson, he was accompanied by his Queen, Elizabeth.

Then, in 1931, came King Prajadhipok of Siam, and Queen Rambai Barnie. President Hoover received them, but there was no attempt to entertain, for the King's visit to America was for the purpose of surgical treatment and he hurried on to Baltimore, where an operation for cataract proved successful. Soon after his return to Siam, Prajadhipok released 3,000 prisoners as a token of joy because his sight had been restored. But before long he was compelled to swell the ranks of other monarchs who are roaming the world minus countries to govern.

And now the portals of the White House swing wide for the entry of George VI, King of Great Britain and Ireland, of Dominions Beyond the Seas, Emperor of India; and his Queen, the second Queen Elizabeth to be made welcome by a President of the United States of America.

They come after having conquered all Canada with their smiles . . . smiles which won even the heart of that ponderously pompous Mayor of Quebec, who in February declared that in the event of England's war with Italy his province would join the Fascist cause.

New Light On Insurance

By Ernest K. Lindley

Another Monopoly?

ANYONE who has been solicited by insurance agents knows how lively the competition is. Lively, that is, in sales talk and sales literature. Lively, also, in the invention of policies with seductive names, combining insurance and saving in numberless ways.

But how lively is the competition in insurance rates—in prices? In the last analysis, how much difference does it make whether you buy your policy from Company A or Company B? Are you or aren't you buying a standard article at a standard price?

This week the TNEC—"monopoly" inquiry—is trying to throw light on the fixing of insurance rates. It is beginning with the rates on group insurance—the insurance of a large group of employes or of all employes in a single business. The buyer of this kind of insurance—whether it be the United States Steel Corporation or a newspaper publisher—has, or had, the ability to force rate concessions which the small individual insurance buyer does not have.

Agreement Finally Made On Group Rates

PRICE COMPETITION in the sale of group insurance policies became so lively that many insurance companies complained of losing money. If the losses were not too great they usually charged them up to promotion—on the theory that group insurance made the individuals covered "insurance conscious" and so, in many instances, customers for individual insurance policies.

But about 1917, according to the data put before the TNEC, actuaries from ten of the big companies began to get together informally. In the course of time they agreed on all the elements that should go into the prices for group insurance. Back in the middle twenties the New York superintendent of insurance was given the power to establish rates for group life insurance contracts. Since then, according to the TNEC data, he has fixed the rates worked out by the actuaries for the companies which do all but a small percentage of the group life insurance business. He had no control over group accident, sickness, and annuity contracts, but the leading companies got together on the formulae for arriving at the prices for these contracts.

Safety Is Kernel Of Insurance Idea

THE GREATEST difficulty apparently was in regulating the dividends or rebates paid by the mutual companies. But a plan was worked out whereby the non-mutual companies could pay the equivalent of rebates to their customers by adjusting prices for the renewal of contracts.

The fixing of rates for group insurance is not necessarily iniquitous. It may be a good thing. Competition in this field apparently had reached the "cut-throat" stage. Possibly this is a business in which there should be no competition whatsoever in price. For safety is the kernel of the idea of insurance.

But if it is a good thing to have fixed prices in the interest of safety for the insurance companies, who should fix the prices? Should they be fixed by private agreement among the companies or their actuaries? Should they be fixed by the New York State superintendent of insurance? should they be fixed high enough to be profitable for the highest-cost insurance companies—those with larger overhead expenses of which, because of poor investments or overcaution in investments (it might be either or both) are earning comparatively small returns on the money placed in their hands? Or should the prices be only high enough to permit the lowest-cost operators in insurance to break even?

Pointer Directed Toward U. S. Rule

THESE ARE SOME of the questions raised before the TNEC by the investigators for the Securities and Exchange Commission, who are conducting the insurance study.

From group insurance they move on to the rates for individual life insurance policies. How were the rate increases of the last several years brought about? That story has been traced, at least in part, by the SEC investigators. Here again the monopolistic traits in the life insurance business will be brought out. The questions raised by the group insurance study will arise again.

In the story appear meetings of which no minutes were kept. Secrecy always suggests wrongdoing. In fact, the participants in some of the meetings seem to have feared that they would run afoul of the law. On the other hand, what they were doing may have been in the best interests of safe, sound insurance.

The real purpose of this part of the TNEC inquiry is to analyze the nature of the life insurance business. Maybe it should be made more competitive. Maybe it should be regarded as an activity to which the rules of competition are inapplicable. In either case, the pointer is directed toward Federal regulation instead of the present mixture of State and private regulation.

In Praise Of Connecticut

WHO IS CONNECTICUT? What is she? Those are the questions that Odell Shepard kept asking himself as he wrote his "Connecticut, Past and Present" (Knopf, $3.50). And if there be elements of the infatuated lover in Mr. Shepard's answers to his own questions, the result still is something unique among all the hosts of recent books about the States and the rivers, the mountains and the cities of these United States. Mr Shepard has sought, as he avows, "to press through information to knowledge, and to go beyond knowledge toward that complete and sympathetic understanding which is always the lover's goal."

His publisher tells us that Odell Shepard is the eldest son of a Methodist bishop, has lived in four States, holds degrees from Northwestern, Chicago and Harvard, and has taught in six colleges and universities, for the last 21 years serving as professor of English literature at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn. I think that to explain him to the readers of this passionate prose poem Mr. Knopf might well have put it thus: Odell Shepard was born, schooled, colleged and married on the flat prairie of northern Illinois. There he began writing, and served two apprenticeships, as church organist and as newspaperman.

In St. Louis, which, though in Missouri, is the southern capital of Illinois and the prairie country, he began his teaching. At 25 he left the Middle West, and for five years taught among the brown hills and raucous voices of southern California. In 1914, aged 30, he came to New England and tumbled head over heels in love with its rolling contours, its green valleys, its ancient peace. He loves it as only a back-trailing Westerner can.

The background of the man, as much as the background of the State, is necessary to an appreciation of this passionately reflective biography of Connecticut. Mr. Snepard, as readers of his Pulitzer-Prize life of Bronson Alcott, "Pedlar's Progress," will recall, is more poet than critic, but he is a discerning poet.

SO HERE is Mr. Shepard's Connecticut: "Everything American from the frontier down to slavery and on to our present bewilderments, is to be found here, and whatever is not found here is not American." Strong words those, from a man who has seen the Spanish Southwest, which is certainly as American as was ever Hartford's Charter Oak. "The changes of mood that a man experiences in walking from one of our towns into the next are greater by far than those he feels in passing from one to another of our largest Western States." That, too, is tall talk from a man who has crossed from Arizona into California, and presumably from California to Oregon. But that is Mr. Shepard's mood.

For he is a prophet of local patriotism. He knows that the brook beds of Connecticut are rocky channels, deeply worn, and are likely to last a long time; the water is not the same water as flowed in Thomas Hooker's day, but it tends to follow the same courses. He likes old names and resents modern highways. He disapproves of men who call the Boston post road "U. S. Route 1," and himself refers to it as the old Pequot War Trail.

He holds that the wild and shaggy Indian names of Connecticut, like the very name of the State, still exercise a charm upon her people: Pattaconk, Skungamaug, Mashamoquet, Willimantic, Obwetuck, Weekeepeemee and Housatonic. And he is profoundly, and not merely enthusiastically, aware of the influence of the old town form of government upon the people of New England.

Connecticut was not a land settled by lonely fur-traders and mountain men. It was settled in communities, not as democratic as sentimentalists would have us believe, and guided by men of force and faith. During its first century "the town decided where and what one's farming land was to be, where one's house should stand, to whom one might or might not sell one's property, what should be done with one's meadows after the grass harvest, how many days a year one should labor on the town roads and bridges, what roads and lanes one must maintain for the town at one's own expense, how much one should pay for the support of the minister, and a hundred other matters of the same sort."

Those town communities are still a force in Connecticut; and they give the town histories of the region a richness and dignity seldom found in local histories on this side of the ocean. Mr. Shepard holds that "a Connecticut town is a world in little; everything has happened in it that can ever happen anywhere."

Upon the restricted character of Connecticut's early democracy Mr. Shepard has things to say which should be read by all ardent State patriots. (He is, definitely, an up-State man, critical of the urban influence of New Haven, once a separate colony from Connecticut and far less liberal, and of New Haven's college, Yale, which long fought to keep Mr. Shepard's Episcopalian college out of the State.) He has, as he walked the byways of the State, studied its ancient tombstones, and he offers a sort of archeological theory of its successive culture complexes, based upon mortuary sculpture, which is as delightful as it is unconvincing.

The first headstones must have been carved with simple skulls and cross-bones. (That he cannot find such does not disturb Mr. Shepard.) In the second, when Puritanism was becoming airier, wings were added to the skulls. (These exist.) In the third, a gentler age, cherubs began to replace the death's heads. And finally, in the last century, Connecticut tombstones came to be ornamented with carved weeping willows and cypresses, and Mr. Shepard wonders whether the artists knew that the cypress was a pagan symbol. At any rate, Connecticut had lost its intimacy with death, and was concerning itself with the invention of things quite different from tombstones.

YOU MAY wander in this book, as Mr. Shepard has wandered through the towns of upper Connecticut, and find curious and diverse matters: as accurate, and lyric, a record of the woodcock's flight song as I have ever read; a hymn to the woods through which Thomas Hooker must have walked when he first trekked from Cambridge; some magnificent invective directed against the water-power companies, also against filling stations and billboards; some sound Indian lore; and plenty of endearing State Chauvinism.

Long Island, Mr. Shepard reminds us, is properly part of the Nutmeg State—he calls it "Connecticut Irredenta"; Westmoreland, Pa., was settled and for a time governed as a part of Litchfield County, Conn.; and the whole Western Reserve country, which Connecticut generously ceded to the Federal Government, is stamped with Connecticut character.

Indeed, it is a fair question whether, really to understand the men who settled and stamped Connecticut, Mr. Shephard should not go West, as so many of those men did. Connecticut herself never had more than a half-dozen Representatives in Congress, but during the first hundred years of the Union, 22 different States sent 187 men born in Connecticut to Washington to represent them. The best in Connecticut rises above local patriotism.

The Formal Note In Motor Mishaps

("Alberta Cooper, driver of the truck that hit the limousine, filled with flowers for Queen Mary. The Queen later dispatched a letter of thanks to the truck driver, expressing the hope he was none the worse for the accident."—News item.)

Now there's sumpin!

It sounds a new note in automobile etiquette. It even points a way to the Proper Reactions to the Auto Crash of Tomorrow.

It is something for America to think over. Principals in auto collisions haven't been very gracious about it, to say the least. Not a case could be dug up today in which a truck driver had carried flowers to the other fellow after a smash-up, and no letters to a truck driver from an accident victim could be found that were printable.

There's something all wrong in American reactions to being bowled over in or by automobiles. We don't take it nicely. We get excited. We pop off too quickly.

What is needed is a slogan "Reach for a bouquet instead of an epithet!"

Why shouldn't fresh flowers and writing equipment be a part of every automobile's equipment? What does Pat Casey, American truck driver, do after he knocks Mrs. Lester Blodgett's phaeton into the meadow? Does he leap out, remove his hat, express his profound regrets and offer a bunch of forget-me-nots? And does Mrs. Blodgett accept them sweetly and pen a little note?

Dear sir: It has been called to my attention that I have been knocked for a loop by your somewhat wildly driven truck. Accidents will happen, mother always said. Think no more about it and pray accept my complete forgiveness and my sincere hopes that you escaped without a scratch. And how is Mrs. Casey?

Not a chance. Casey stands over Mrs. Blodgett bawling her out to a fare-thee-well, demanding, "Was you drivin' in your sleep or what?" and asking who's going to pay for his bent bumper. And Mrs. Blodgett using language of which she thought herself incapable says, "And what's more you big bum, I'll take you to court for this and see that you are put in that bamboo corral with the other gorillas."

There's no sense to it, and no refinement. How about formal cards in every truck and car for presentation immediately after the collision:

MR. T. WENLEY POTTS
Respectfully requests to see your driver's license.

And perhaps a little follow up from the truck operator:

MR. MIKE CAZETTO
Desires to interrogate you as to where the deuce you thought you were going—to a FIRE? Flowers. Dancing.

Culinary Aversions

This department's recent lines "My heart unbuckled to pigs' knuckles" and "Sauerbraten is best forgotten" has led the American Legion's columnist to spring the following:

Greeting To Royalty

How They Did It In Paris

WASHINGTONIANS and those who trek into the Capital from the hinterlands for a gander at Their Majesties, George and Elizabeth, on Thursday may well get goose pimples at the sight of the military display planned for the day of their arrival. This would not be surprising in view of the general hoopla over the ceremonies during the recent visit of the President of Nicaragua.

For the reception to be accorded the royal visitors on Thursday will be elaborate by American peacetime standards. There will be some 6,100 troops on hand, including 1,200 Marines and 500 Bluejackets. There will be military music aplenty from various bands, including those of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps. The procession from Union Station to the White House will be escorted by units from the Infantry, Artillery and Cavalry branches of the Army. Fifteen tanks will rattle along ahead of the royal-Presidential party and 15 more will follow. An aerial escort of flying fortresses and pursuit planes will whizz overhead. Soldiers and marines will be posted along the route. Detectives will mingle in the crowds. Secret Service men will swarm over the automobiles flanking the royal entourage.

BUT TO George and Elizabeth the show will be small potatoes indeed. Not that they are accustomed to much military hullabaloo when they voyage about the British Isles, but just about one year ago they traveled to Paris to prepare the ground for the transformation of a growing friendship into a military alliance. And there the King and Queen were given a reception that makes our own take on the appearance of a Boy Scout jamboree.

For instance, on the comparable trip from Union Station to the White House the King and Queen last year traveled a considerably longer route—something over 6 miles from the Gare du Bois de Boulogne to the Palais d'Orsay. On both sides of the avenues traversed were double lines of infantrymen standing shoulder to shoulder, whereas we shall have one line standing at arm's length apart. In Washington, city police will stand behind the soldiers facing the crowd—an innovation on this side of the Atlantic. In Paris, the cops were placed behind the double lines of soldiers, standing 10 feet apart facing the street. Behind them were lined Guard Mobile again standing shoulder to shoulder.

Here, as in Paris, the King and Queen will ride in an open car, but there will be four scout cars with Secret Service men cruising over the route of the parade, while in Paris the royal vehicle was completely surrounded by mounted Guard Republicaine riding at a fast trot. These brilliantly uniformed horsemen wearing plumed bronze helmets form the private protective force of the President of France.

ALTHOUGH there were some 15,000 troops in Paris that day, not counting the Guard Mobile, the Guard Republicaine and thousands of firemen, the French didn't really try to do anything in a military way on the first day of the visit, concentrating instead on pageantry and color. There were, for instance, the coal-black Senegalese riflemen, brought especially from Africa for the occasion, lined up in front of the Palais d'Orsay. And the hundred or so small tanks banking the periphery of the Place de la Concorde. And the Spahis bordering the Place de l'Etoile in the center of which stands the Arc de Triomphe. Even our Marine uniforms will look pretty drab in comparison with these picturesque brown desertmen from North Africa, who salute by standing erect in the stirrups of their little Arabian horses, sabers gleaming skyward, colored robes tumbling from their shoulders.

The whole procession was under the ultimate direction of a police blimp drifting overhead in telephonic contact with those in charge of the ground forces. But the big military staff was saved for the final day of the visit when George traveled out to Versailles to review the French army in miniature as units of every branch rolled and marched by for 65 minutes in the biggest military show since the armistice.

FROM THE SPECTATORS' standpoint, however, the American crowds will get a somewhat better break. It would be only a minute defection from the truth to say that none of the common citizenry of Paris saw anything of their royal guests unless they went to the movies to see the official British newsreel several days later.

Along the line of march none of the spectators was allowed to gain a point of elevation such as on a rise in the ground, a tree-top or a roof. All stools, boxes or anything on which the gapers might want to stand to get a better peek were taboo, as were periscopes, although a few of these were in evidence.

The net result was that by getting in the first line of spectators—by arriving hours in advance—and peering between the shoulders of four lines of soldiers and police one might get a fragmentary glimpse of an automobile surrounded by horsemen going rapidly by and in which, it could be assumed, were riding the King and Queen of England.

From the streets as well as from the windows of office buildings and hotels along the route the great American public stands an even chance of feasting its collective eye on the royal couple for a brief moment, especially since the procession will travel at the rate of 4 miles an hour, while in Paris they were whipped along at a much faster pace.

So Washington spectators may be impressed by the spectacle of it all and, for that matter, George and Elizabeth may be pleased and even flattered, but if their memories are not too short they will recall a bigger and better show.

Swing to Soviet Not by Panic, Says Churchill

British Recognize Common Desire for Peace, He Asserts

By Winston Churchill
Special Cable to The Post

London, June 6.—It is astonishing how swiftly and decisively opinion in Great Britain and France has consolidated itself upon a triple alliance with Soviet Russia. The well-known objections have ceased to count with enormous numbers of people with whom abhorrence of communism is still a first principle. But it should not be supposed that this change arises out of any desperate strait or panic fear. It is due to the realization of the very real harmony of interests which unites the foreign policy of the three countries.

Their common interest is peace. Not one of them has anything to gain and all have much, if not everything, to lose by war. The conviction is widespread that around this triple alliance there can be formed so large a bloc of armed and arming states as will make the dictators ponder long and anxiously before they attack them.

Neither should it be imagined that Soviet Russia is conferring a great favor upon the western democracies by joining with them for common defense. Russian interests are deeply involved. The arrival of the Nazi legions and the creation of Nazi flotillas on the Black Sea would imperil Soviet Russia. Polish independence is no less important to Soviet Russia than to Great Britain and France. The invasion by Nazidom of the Baltic states or Finland would force Russia, even if she stood alone, to renew the wars of Peter the Great.

Senate Commerce Committee Approves Plan for Air Training

The Senate Commerce Committee yesterday approved the last remaining phase of the President's emergency defense program, an authorization for training 20,000 college students annually as air pilots.

Under the measure, 200 to 300 universities and colleges will establish flight courses in September. The plan has the double purpose of providing a reserve of partially trained fliers for use as military aviators in an emergency and serving as "feeder" for the present expanded Army and Navy training programs.

In another defense development, President Roosevelt nominated Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, as Governor of Puerto Rico, effective September 1. The veteran naval officer, who will retire from the Navy when Congress adjourns, will become the civil executive of the highly populated island at a time when its military importance has become paramount.

Admiral Leahy will succeed Maj. Gen. Blanton Winship, retired Army officer whose resignation was announced at the same time. Winship, 69-year-old former Army Judge Advocate General, has held the post for five years and sometime ago indicated desire to be relieved of the island post.

Army and Navy plans to make Puerto Rico a defense center for protection of the Panama Canal, southern United States and northern South America, are expected to benefit economic conditions on the island. More than $30,000,000 is expected to be spent on new air fields and other installations.

The Navy announced yesterday that its first aircraft carrier, the Langley, now converted to an aircraft tender for patrol planes, will be detached from the Atlantic Squadron Friday and will be assigned to Patrol Wing Two, at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, further reducing Naval forces on this coast.

The House Military Affairs Committee formally reported the Army "vitalization" bill, which it approved last week. It would retire 2,000 over-age Army officers in the next few years.

Administration of the civil air training program will be in the hands of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, with co-operation of the Army and Navy. Civilian pilots and planes will be hired by the Government to carry on the training at air fields near colleges at which courses are established. Enrollment in these course will not be confined to regular college students, it was said.

The Senate committee placed a limitation of $7,000,000 on expenditures under the measure in any one year with but $5,675,000 allowed the first year. Authorization is only for a five-year plan, but if successful it is expected to be made permanent. CAA officials said that under the annual $7,000,000 authorization, training can be given either to 20,000 new students or only 15,000 new students can be trained if "refresher" courses are provided for graduates of previous years' courses. The first-year allowance will provide for 15,000, it was said.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Don't Try to Copy Film Stars—That Way The Hospital Lies!

DON'T TRY TO copy the movie actresses too closely as to weight. Some of them are too thin even on the screen—which magnifies size—and when seen in person a few are startlingly skinny . . . and who wouldn't be, weighing only 110 pounds for five feet four, which is typical!

The reason for this tirade on the movie weight standard is the latest diet to emanate from Hollywood . . . "just eat a fruit or vegetable salad for dinner and you won't have to worry about the other meals." This was released as news so that woman's page writers might relay it to the rest of the feminine world along with the idea that "if a salad diet does the trick for the glamour girls it will do the trick for you."

Nibbling Is Dangerous

Well, I'll tell you what it will do for you! It will put you in a hospital—unless you get your protective foods at the other two meals you are not supposed to have to worry about! I do not know exactly what the movie girls do about breakfast and lunch but if they don't eat any better than the average business girl and then take only a fruit or vegetable salad for diner, the consequences are apt to be extremely serious. And a movie star I interviewed the other day was so underweight that it was all I could do to keep from begging her to build herself up!

This does not apply to all the movie stars by any means. Some of them are more beautiful off-screen than on, but they are the wise ones who keep their measurements perfectly streamlined through exercise. They don't starve to keep their weight down! They have discovered that their figures are much more streamlined with well-toned muscles and this is quite true, because although muscle weighs more than fat, it takes up less space than bulky fat. Compact musculature also allows them to have a little reserve fat without appearing large on the screen. Softly rounded curves are prettier than angles. Moreover, a small reserve represents a safety margin for health.

Aids Glamour

As a last argument against starving yourself: You will have a better chance for glamour if you have normal weight for your structure! So here is a good balanced menu containing everything you need and one which will, nevertheless, help you to streamline your weight.

Lace Curtains May Be Washed

Would you put lace curtains in the washer to cleanse them?

Unless the lace curtains in question are very fragile they can be washed satisfactorily in a household washer, providing care is used. When cleansing any type of delicate material in a washer, it is important to use plenty of soap and water and not to overload the machine. Also the washer should be run only as long as is necessary to remove the soil.

Wash curtains frequently, as soon as signs of dustiness appear, for this adds to their life. They always should be handled carefully, as they may have become weakened from hanging in the light. Shake them gently to remove dust.

Relax in Slacks

Every week-end in the country or beach this summer will find bright young people in slacks and shirts, the now established costume for almost every idle hour of the day. There is only one rule to be remembered if you decide to relax in slacks this summer. Keep your figure and your slacks trim, for perfect silhouette results. The girl (above) has done both. Both shirt and slacks have that well-cut, well-creased look—straight-lined and neat, due to their fabric, which is satin-back gabardine weave of teca acetate rayon. Wearing the shirt outside is a figure help for the hippy girl

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Career Woman's Husband

His picture is not on her desk, neither are there subtle reminders of him in enlarged snapshots on every wall. His unseen presence does not put any icy, rest aining hand on salesmen or men office colleagues who may linger at her desk.

He does not venture to be seen within a radius of six blocks of her office on pay day. In a restaurant or other public place he does not dare borrow change of her or even a postage stamp.

Seldom do her social invitations of a professional nature include him. Usually she stags it at office parties, civic banquets et cetera. If she has a seat on the platform at an important function, he must hide in the gallery. Even her closest friends frequently forget him in telephoning party invitations.

When he calls on the telephone he is hurried, craven, apologetic. He some way fancies that those who take his calls are impatient and contemptuous. He is usually told to leave his number or call later.

When he visits her at the office he feels like an agent barging in with a set of encyclopedias. He always has to wait interminably to see her and her colleagues greet him casually and disinterestedly.

No matter how important a personality he may be in his own right yet when he meets his wife's business associates outside the office he immediately feels himself a drab, shadowy fellow known to them as "Miss Smith's husband," of even "Mr. Mary Smith."

Career Man's Wife

In a large framed picture on his desk and in numerous informal poses with her kiddies on the walls, she gives perpetual warning to women office visitors that he has been tamed and domesticated.

On pay days she arrives promptly 15 minutes before the "ghost walks" and triumphantly leaves the office with him in tow, bound for luncheon or a shopping expedition. She frequently runs in at odd times for an extra dollar or two when she is downtown.

She is included in all his social-professional invitations—or else. If he is an honor guest at the weekly luncheon of the Amazon Club, she is sitting in splendor beside him. If he is on the committee to welcome the visiting Malay chieftain, she sits with the distinguished guests on the platform.

When she calls his office every one—telephone operator, office boy, secretary—is deferential and helpful and she is put instantly on the line no matter how deeply engrossed "in conference" he may be.

When she visits his office, she is greeted on all sides with deference (and probably plenty of envious looks) and is immediately ushered into the presence of the great man.

No matter how insignificant a personality she may be in her own right, whenever she meets any of her husband's business associates outside the office, she immediately feels an aura of importance enveloping her, knowing that she is being looked upon awesomely as "Mr. Smith's wife" or "Mrs. John Smith."

How to Eat Alone at Fair

By Martha Ellyn.

The Post Food Editor.

THE WOMAN vacationist who is going to New York should read "New York, Fair Or No Fair," written by Marjorie Hillis, the author of "Live Alone and Like It." The old friends Miss X., Miss M. and Mrs. S., are back in lively case histories as they were in the earlier book. These ladies get around town without a man, covering everything from the Bronx to the Battery. All the information needed about New York luggage to take, clothes to wear, where to eat, where to shop, what to see and how to get around are given in this guide book.

You can learn interesting places to eat at the right prices.

Restaurants for luncheon are suggested for their specialties, such as the outdoor pavilion of Marguery's; Sherry's, where you will want to lunch because of the famous violet box; French food at Henri's; Theodore's, where you see some of the most successful business girls of New York, and the Algonquin, where the celebrities gather at noon and the rest of the world goes to look at them.

Whether you want to eat dinner where they offer Southern dishes, from mint juleps to fried chicken, as served at Elizabeth Reynolds; the food with a Middlewestern touch as served by Susan Palmer, famous for her specialities—orange rolls, chicken and almond entree, and eggnog pie; hearty German dishes such as sauerbroten with red cabbage and potato dumplings and apple strudel; or the more sophisticated restaurants where the food is definitely French and you take a long time for dinner and savor each course, you will find information as to location, specialties and the prices.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Would Children Feel Dismally Obligated to Mother Who Worked to Finance Their Education?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We are a family of four. My husband is a professional man employed at a moderate salary. Our daughters will enter their fourth and second years in high school next September. Each is eager to go to college, but without financial assistance from me, they will be denied this opportunity. The older girl is a brilliant student and her teachers have told me that it would be most unfortunate if she could not complete her education.

The course of study she has elected would mean a full four years' college course with two years' additional study after that. There is a possibility of a scholarship for her, but even that would entail more expense than we could possibly afford, and the younger girl would be coming along only two years later.

I was employed in a secretarial capacity before marriage, and resumed the work for short periods two or three times after marriage, when my husband needed help. I would like to return to school this summer to "brush up" on my stenography and typing, and then take a position in the fall. This would enable me to have some money saved by the time the older girl is ready for college. My experience has been largely in legal and medical work, but any line of work would be acceptable so long as it is permanent.

My husband has no objection to my doing office work, although the question has been raised by a friend as to whether my children might not feel they "owed" me something if I worked to put them through college. But I believe they would know they were free to marry or to go their own way at any time. Furthermore, I would prefer office work to trifling around with luncheons, bridge parties and what-not in an effort to "kill" time, of which I seem to have an abundance since the children are no longer physically dependent upon me. I will soon be 40 years old, and while I believe my appearance is in my favor—because I am slim—still I do not look like a 20-year-old, just out of school.

Now for my question: Do you think it would be difficult for me to find employment at my age? And do you think my children would actually feel that they were not free to pursue their own happiness, just because I had gone back to an office job? I would like your opinion, as well as the opinions of other women who have coped with the same problem. I would also like the opinions of employers. Yours very truly,

M. M. M.

Fighting Straw Men

DEAR M. M. M.: If you have need of a job and are determined to find one, don't waste time and confuse your purpose by asking rhetorical questions to which no one can supply the absolute answer. There is only one way to learn whether it is going to be difficult for you to find employment at your age—and that is by fitting yourself for a given position and then going after it.

Persons with a pessimistic turn of mind might tell you, in all truth, that it is not easy, nowadays, for anybody — not even youth with the best of credentials —to find suitable or adequately remunerative employment; and that luck plays as big a part in finding a job as do pluck, proficiency, pleasing personality and prepossessing appearance. But more optimistic persons might say, with equal truth, that the woman of your age has definite advantages over untried youth, in the gruelling competitive struggle for professional preference.

For one thing, you have the enormous advantage of a past record of vocational experience. For another, you have the inner poise which comes of knowing that you do know "how to do—which is of inestimable value when one must "sell one's self" to a prospective employer. You have, moreover, the seasoned character to meet rebuff without losing heart; to carry on in the face of today's discouragement, knowing that tomorrow is (as we say) another day, and that with it may come desired opportunity which eluded you today.

Then, too, you are spiritually (because economically) free of the demoralizing pressure inherent in a driving need to find employment by a given date. Neither you nor your loved ones will suffer loss of caste or physical privation if you shouldn't find a job within the year. It seems to me, indeed, that you are very happily implemented, and most fortunately circumstanced, for the adventure of job-hunting.

Since your experience has been "largely in legal and medical work," go over these fields as with a fine-tooth comb in search of an opening. As book-keeper, receptionist and secretary combined, you might find a job in a doctor's or dentist's office; or a comparable niche in a lawyer's office. Also, since you have a voting residence in Maryland, investigate the possibilities of Federal employment. Political preferment or indorsement, if combined with bona fide personal efficiency as an office worker, might land you a Government berth.

You are simply fighting straw men (toying with "the will to fail," as Dorothea Brande calls it) in raising the question as to whether your children would feel that their futures were mortgaged to you, if you worked to finance their education. If you find happiness in such work for its own sake—as an intelligent alternative to the futile pastimes of luncheons, bridge-partie and what-not—as well as the deeper satisfaction of discharging what you believe to be one of your fundamental obligations as a parent (namely: that of giving your children the amount of education which you believe to be their due) then why on earth should they feel guiltily indebted to you for your enterprise? The answer is—They won't, if they are properly educated, and if your own attitude is sound.

As a matter of fact, most children, as well as their maternal parents, would be happier, and better friends (because psychically more independent of each other) if the latter had the enterprise to address themselves to the task of doing the world's work (so-called), when their tour of active duty as mother-on-the-job had come to a close—which is to say, when their children are of an age to be ready either for college or for a trial voyage in the business world. It is the mother who has (and loudly proclaims) no interest in life save her children, who insidiously stands between them and the spontaneous, wholehearted pursuit of their own happiness, in their respective ways.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Arrangements Make Flowers Effective

Pale Pink Peonies Put in Whatnot in Low, White Container

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THE LADY across the street is a real dirt gardener. She really does her own digging . . . she was the one who put me onto the use of a garden fork and showed me how you can practically plow with it even if you aren't built on strong-arm lines. Just set it place, stand on it with your entire weight and in it goes deep into the ground much more easily than a spade.

She almost got ahead of herself recently, however, all because she made a too-ambitious order from a nursery that advertised some tempting specials. My neighbor suddenly was confronted with 50 barberry plants, 100 Packysandra shoots, 2 dogwoods, 3 wisteria and 25 chrysanthemums that had to be got into the ground by hook or crook. Quite a big order for one lady, but she made flowering things run all to pinks and lavenders—nearly her whole garden is like that because those are the colors she likes best in the house. Roses, violets, lilacs, tulips, gladioli, sweet peas, peonies, phlox, petunias, asters are her specialties and she's hoping to do well with her pink dogwood, chrysanthemums and wisteria.

Her flower arrangements are breathtaking . . . we remember a tea table she did for a big party —lavender sweet peas and pink roses arranged in a three-tiered glass epergne (an old one but the same idea could be copied with matching bowls of graduated sizes). This was the tall centerpiece . . . it was flanked by three finger bowls in a row on each side, filled with sweet peas, with stems cut short and a pink rose in the center of each.

Another dramatic effect she gets with peonies in a corner whatnot. She has low white containers to fit on each shelf and arranges pale pink peonies in them—you can imagine! For her mantle, she has a series of shallow oblong glass containers which fit together and cover the entire mantel shelf—this looks like a prim flower border growing there when she arranges flowers in season here.

Sonia Tamara, Writer Yearns for European Turmoil; Tennis Champion Is Tea Hostess

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Among my June tasks in delivering a ringing lecture to a graduating class of 200 girls in Pittsburgh, and I hope I can avoid sounding like an educator pointing the road to hard work and high ideals. As a matter of fact, I believe in bright ideas, workable ideals and as little work as possible, but I won't tell that to the Pittsburgh girls—and then again, maybe I shall.

AT MY HAIRDRESSER'S the other day I met Sonia Tamara, foreign correspondent for a great local paper. A year ago she came back to America having covered Italy, France and other countries for her paper. "I want to do general news reporting and really learn what this country is about. I'm sick of foreign situations and intrigue and such things," she told me at Lindsay Parrott's house one night. Now it is a year later and in the hairdresser's chair she told me how she yearned to get back into the thick of it all—general assignments were all right but without excitement. Back to the volcano of erupting Europe is where Sonia wants to be now. She is a tall, slender distinguished looking girl, quiet of manner, brilliant of mind and counted one of the best foreign correspondents in the world. I first met her in Rome one January—where she had the respect of everyone, from Mussolini down . . .

My favorite name of all is in the news again, in a quiet way. Lassie Honeyman has married again. Her new husband is Dr. Ralph Bennett, and the wedding took place in Pasadena, Calif. Lassie had quite a spectacular career here as a social beauty, but now I hope she will just be a good doctor's wife. After all, what better can I wish her? . . .

THE TEA HOSTESS at the very classy Sulgrave Club at the Fair is a former tennis champion named Mrs. Baggar Wallach. Oddly enough, for a long time she had wanted to meet Eddie Cantor, and just missed him by a few minutes when he dropped in for a saucer of oolong. By how little are our wishes frustrated!

FASHION IS always forehanded, as we all know, and already they are telling us what the well-dressed little girl will wear next fall. Teal blue is the color prophesied, and the pundits say that the swing skirt will continue to sell in volume, But that back fullness is newer. Authorities are agreed that jacket, skirt and sweater outfits have become uniforms for school girls of all ages. With this advance information at hand, we can shop in peace.

Rumanian Orchestra Lends Native Touch at Irimescu Reception

Party Marks Ninth Anniversary of King Carol's Restoration to Throne; Mexican Ambassador Entertains for Flier Sarabia

THE RUMANIAN ORCHESTRA, direct from its country's pavilion at the World's Fair, added a picturesque touch with a gypsy accent to the reception given yesterday afternoon by the Rumanian Minister and Mme. Irimescu. Dressed in native costume—bright embroidered jackets, with black trousers, belted with satin—the band played in the upstairs foyer, where a table for drinks and sandwiches was set up. Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Washington's premier patron of music, who listened approvingly for some time and even ordered several requests of her own, declared the music was superb.

The party marked the ninth anniversary of King Carol's restoration to the throne. The actual date is June 8, but since that's the day of the royal garden party at the British embassy, the Minister and Mme. Irimescu chose yesterday as the time to celebrate.

Spacious rooms of the white stone legation just off Sheridan Circle, opposite the Turkish embassy, were thronged with members of Capital society, both official and residential, who came to drink a toast in champagne to King Carol, who, though a "crowned head," is also the unchallenged political leader of his country.

The German Charge d'Affaires and Frau Thomsen (Rumania has a larger German minority than Hungary or Yugoslavia) came and left early, the latter wearing a fuchsia flower hat with her black frock. From across the street came the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun—the Rumanian Foreign Minister, Grigore Ganfencu, hopes to make an important visit to their country soon.

THE PERUVIAN ENVOY, Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, threaded his way through the crowd as though he were in a hurry. Other diplomats present included Victor Mallet, Counselor of the British Embassy, who was accompanied by blonde Mrs. Mallet—she wore a semi-tailored white frock with a matching straw hat pulled low over her blonde hair. The Portuguese Minister and Mme. Bianchi made the rounds with the latter's daughter, Miss Sibilla Skidelsky. The Cuban Ambassador came with his Minister-Counselor, Dr. Jose Baron.

Pretty Representative Edith Nourse Rogers wore a pink frock with a blending flower turban, while Mrs. William E. Borah was in a becoming white outfit. Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator Clyde Herring and Mrs. D. Worth Clark were others from Congressional circles.

Among neighbors of the Irimescus who strolled over to the party were Mr. and Mrs. C. Mathews Dick. She wore her favorite black and white. Mrs. Eldridge Jordan and Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, who has recently returned from New York, arrived together.

ONE OF THE prettist frocks there was that worn by Mrs. Casey Green, of New York, daughter of the American-born hostess. With her floor-length black chiffon she wore a tricky poke bonnet, black and beige with a big bow, perched on the back of her head. She and her husband, who also was present, will return to New York tomorrow.

Another out-of-towner there was Mrs. Charles Astor Bristed, of New York, who came with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem. Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman had with her her daughter, Miss Laura Tuckerman, and Mr. and Mrs. Woodson Houghton were others glimpsed chatting with friends.

Other members of Capital society present included Mrs. George Thorpe, Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, Miss Mary B. Adams, Donald Downs, Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy, Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis, Brig. Gen. and Mrs Dion Williams, Lathrop Stoddard, Mr. and Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, Mr. and Mrs. Loy Henderson, Ralph Snowden Hill, Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mrs. Atherton Macondray, Mrs. Eldon King, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Lady Leslie, and dozens of others, all of whom agreed that it was one of the biggest—and best—parties of the season.

A SMALLER, but equally diverting reception, was that given yesterday at the same time by the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo-Najera. The fete was arranged in honor of their distinguished countryman, Francisco Sarabia, who recently broke the record for a nonstop flight from Mexico City to New York, making the trip in 10 hours. The previous record for this flight had been 14 hours.

Senor Sarabia, who speaks English perfectly, has been flying for the past 12 years and holds several other records, among them a flight from Mexico City to Los Angeles. He made his present trip in a tiny one-seater plane, in which he will return today to his homeland. His host, the Ambassador, flies frequently between here and the Mexican capital, and said yesterday that he had spent 500 hours in the air.

THE EMBASSY is one of the coolest spots that can be found in Washington on a hot day. Yesterday most of the guests gathered in the conservatory, which is filled with palms and ferns, and opens onto a terraced roof. Among the cooling drinks served here was watermelon juice, which many of the American guests sampled for the first time.

The tea table in the dining room was set with all kinds of dainties, and centered with an enormous vase of pink and white peonies. Several ladies of the embassy took turns pouring tea, among them Senora de Fuentes, wife of the Counselor, who wore a smart navy blue and white hand-blocked print, with a broad-brimmed hat; Senora de Sierra, wife of the newly arrived Third Secretary of the Embassy, with black hair drawn straight back over her ears, and Senorita Erma Castillo Majera, daughter of the host, who was in cool green.

TWO OF THE MOST interesting guests there were Miss Nancy Byrd, famous Australian aviatrix, and Mrs. Constance Robinson, social editress of the Sydney (Australia) Morning Herald, who has come all the way around the world for the express purpose of reporting the activities of the King and Queen in Washington. She left last night to meet them in Buffalo and will attend the royal garden party.

Miss Boykin, Daughter of the Representative, Is Married to Riley Smith in Alexandria

Bride Wears White; Flowers Bank Alter At Christ Church

Of wide interest to Congressional circles here was the wedding last night of Miss Frances Ocllo Boykin, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Frank William Boykin, of Mobile, Ala., to Riley Smith, son of Mrs. A. H. Smith, of Greenwood, Miss. The ceremony took place at 7 o'clock in Christ Church, Alexandria, the rector, the Rev. Harry Lee Doll officiating.

White flowers of several varieties, ferns, and palms banked the altar. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin gown made on empire lines, with a long square train. Her silk net veil fell from a Juliet cap of pearls caught with orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of white roses, orchids, and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Paul William Bryant was her matron of honor, wearing a gown of sea-foam green lace made with a tight bodice and full skirt. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of yellow roses.

Donald H. Adams, of Washington, was best man, and the ushers were Harry Duncan, Charles Malone, and Robert McFadden, all of this city, and Richard Boykin, of Mobile, brother of the bride.

A reception at the Congressional Club, 2001 New Hampshire avenue, followed the ceremony. The assistants, who included several daughters of members of the House, were the Misses Gladys Kitchens, Amrah Fortune, Reba Doughton, Mary Maud Moss, Betty Jenson, Fanchon Aldrich, Nancy Shaw, Miss Elizabeth Mahon, of Greenville, S. C., and Mrs. James Hugh Nelson. Also assisting were the wives of members of the Alabama delegation in Congress: Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. John Sparkman, Mrs. George Grant, Mrs. Luther Patrick, Mrs. Pete Jarman, Mrs. I. T. Miss Wonders Wedded to S. J. Porter

Baltimore Breakfast Follows Ceremony At St. Alban's

Easter lilies and pale pink peonies were massed about the altar of St. Alban's Episcopal Church for the wedding there yesterday at noon of Miss Theda May Wonders, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Wonders, of 2737 Devonshire place, to Stevens Strawn Porter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Stevens Porter, of this city.

The Rev. Charles T. Warner officiated at the ceremony, which was followed by a breakfast for the wedding party and immediate families at the Belvedere Hotel in Baltimore. The young couple sailed from there later for a Southern cruise, after which they will reside in Washington.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white garden frock of marquisette made with puffed sleeves and a sweeping skirt. Her broad-brimmed white horsehair hat was trimmed with velvet ribbon to match, and she carried white roses and lilies of the valley, flowers of the bridegroom's fraternity, Sigma Nu.

Sister Is Maid of Honor

Miss Katherine M. Porter, sister of Mrs. Porter, served as maid of honor for her sister, attired in powder blue eyelet organdy with a large leghorn hat trimmed with pale peach ribbon. Her bouquet of mixed garden flowers was tied with the same sort of ribbon. Miss Elga Jafboe, of Baltimore, the maid of honor, was similarly attired in a frock of pale peach shade. Reginald M. Hodgson, of Washington, was best man, and the ushers were James I. Porter, brother of the bridegroom; William R. Scott, K. Ross Jordon and Robert D. Weaver.

Senators' Wives Will Not Curtsy At British Embassy Party

MOST of the Senate wives have decided not to curtsey at tomorrow's garden party—largely because of the recent Gallup poll which says the majority of the "folks back home" don't believe Americans should. The wife of one Western Senator even remarked "It would kill us politically." For the same reason they favor wearing street-length dresses, so the folks won't think they're being impressed too much by Their Majesties. "I just wore a simple little tailored number" is what some of them look forward to saying nonchalantly when their constituents ask what they selected for the big event.

EVERYBODY with a house or apartment along the line of route to the garden function is planning "parade parties." Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Lacy will come up from Leesburg to join their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy, whose house fronts on Massachusetts avenue. George Abell will entertain at a buffet luncheon beforehand. Members of the Italian Embassy staff who are not going to the party expect to gather at the residence, practically next door to the Lacys, of the Secretary and Countess Roberti.

VIRGINIA COWLES, currently visiting Washington, belongs to that enviable group termed "journalists," as distinguished from just plain, ordinary newspaper people. Being a journalist means getting all kinds of exciting assignments and skipping the routine drudgery. Virginia was the only writer who visited the camps of both sides in the Spanish war. She also spent a few exciting nights in jail in Czecho-Slovakia and is now doing a series of political articles on America in the London Times. Young, chic and attractive, she moves in the most select London circles, lunches often with Winston Churchill and has dined with Lloyd George and Anthony Eden. She is the daughter of Dr. Edward Cowles, of New York.

With her sister, Mrs. Willard Reed, who lived in Washington before her recent marriage, Virginia has been touring the entire United States by car, visiting C. C. C. camps and WPA projects. She says she is greatly impressed by the energy, courage and bustle of this country.

And Virginia also tells us that Martha Gellhorn, who is well known in Washington, is now in Cuba collaborating with Earnest Hemingway on a new book. Miss Gellhorn, who is a close friend of Mrs. Roosevelt, is a beautiful blonde and had an apartment here a few years ago.

BARON AND BARONESS Mario Bucovich couldn't have picked a better day or a cooler setting for the lawn party they gave yesterday afternoon to exhibit some of the former's photographs. Baron Bucovich has leased for the summer the lodge on the beautiful Walter Schoellkopf estate on Macomb street, a small frame house set on a ravine and surrounded by handsome old trees.

Small tables had been set up on the gravel path, centered with vases of field flowers, and here the guests lingered on until well after 7. Baroness Bucovich, who has only recently joined her husband in Washington, bids fair to give the glamour girls a run for their money, as she is a strikingly lovely person, with black hair and enormous eyes. She is a style expert by profession and looked so yesterday in a smart black and white print with a white turban.

The photographs were scenes taken by the host last winter in Florida, as well as portrait studies of various well-known folk here and abroad. Among those who wandered about admiring them were Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, in a blue and white print; Representative and Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth and Angus Malcolm, who chatted with Marcia Umbsen (his mother, Lady Malcolm, was guest of honor at a dinner given last night at Grasslands by Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett).

Miss Anne Harcourt, English portrait painter who spent a season here a year ago, was being welcomed back on all sides. She is in town until Friday. Others present were Kemper Simpson, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, a photograph of whose daughter, Mrs. Herbert Stratford, adorned the exhibition; M. and Mme Edgar Prochnik, Mrs. Randall Hagner, in a cool yellow print, chatting with Kurt Hetzel, Mrs. Noyes Lewis, Max Dunlap Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Noyes, and several others.

MRS. JERAULD WRIGHT is being welcomed back on all sides during her visit here with her husband's parents, Gen. and Mrs. William Mason Wright. She plans to leave on Friday for a stay in the Canadian woods, and then about June 20 will move into hers and Comdr. Wright's new quarters at Annapolis.

Armstrongs On Honeymoon

Maj. and Mrs. Clare Hibbs Armstrong, who were married on Monday at the home here of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Homer LeMar Kitt, 3120 Woodland drive, will make their home at West Point, N. Y. The bride is the former Elizabeth Weber Harter, daughter of Mrs. William Weber, of Columbia City, Ind., and the late Dr. Weber.

The ceremony took place at noon, the Rev. Charles T. Warner officiating in a setting of Madonna lilies and white peonies. The bride wore a frock of flesh-colored mousseline de soie and carried a spray of white orchids. The couple dispensed with attendants.

A breakfast followed the ceremony. Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Weber, her sons, Edward A. Weber, of White Plains, N. Y., and Ross Weber, of Salt Lake City; the latter's daughter, Miss Mary Jane Weber, and Miss Betty Anne and DeWitt Armstrong, children of Maj. Armstrong.

Mrs. Armstrong's husband was the late Paul Lewis Harter.

Mrs. Cameron Spending Summer at Newport

Mrs. Duncan Cameron and Miss Elsie Howland Quinby will leave for Newport, R. I., the end of this week. They will spend the summer there at Little Clifton Berley.

Both Mrs. Cameron and Miss Quinby were in New York for the races, returning to Washington yesterday.

Mrs. Deimel Hostess at Tea

Mrs. Henry L. Deimel, jr., wife of Mr. Deimel, of the trade agreements section of the State Department, entertained at a large tea party yesterday afternoon at her home on Macomb street. Guests gathered in the living room and on the porch, where tea and cocktails were served.

Assisting were Mrs. Henry Grady, sister-in-law of Mrs. Deimel; her daughter, Miss Patricia Grady; Mrs. Jesse Saugstad, Mrs. Harry Hawkins, Mrs. Louis Dreller, Mrs. Leo Pasvolsky, Mrs. Frederick Livesey, Mrs. Joseph Jacobs, Mrs. Wallace McClure, Mrs. Temple Saey and Miss Mary Janet Deimel, daughter of the hostess.

Mrs. Deimel wore a street-length frock of blue crepe de chine, with a blue pin at the V-neckline.

Parents Visit Mrs. Pepper on Way to Fair

Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper have as their guests the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Webster, of St. Augustine, Fla., who are here for a few days en route to New York to see the World's Fair.

Mrs. Robert Stanley Adams, wife of State Senator Adams, of Florida, who has been the house guest of Senator and Mrs. Pepper, has gone to see the fair. She is accompanied by her daughter, Miss Frances Adams, a recent graduate of Sullins College in Bristol, Va., and by her son, Stanley.

HONORING King George and Queen Elizabeth, a British Union Jack will flutter from the tall flagstaff in the garden of Alva Belmont House on Capitol Hill. From this house in the summer of 1814 were fired the only shots in defense of Washington after defeat of the American forces by the British at Bladensburg, during the War of 1812.

Alva Belmont House, now headquarters of the National Woman's Party, is one of the oldest houses in the District of Columbia. According to tradition it was built in 1752 by the third Lord Baltimore, as a wedding gift to his daughter. During the last years of the Colonial period and the first years of the new Republic it was the center of a gay social life and many distinguished persons of that time, including Washington, Jefferson, Burr and others were said to have enjoyed its hospitality.

THE TENTH ANNIVERSARY of Gamma Chi Chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority at George Washington University will be observed with a luncheon Saturday at the Wardman Park Hotel. Kappa Kappa Gamma is 69 years old and one of the leading sororities in the Panhellenic group. Its philanthropies include graduate fellowships, scholarship aid fund open to outsiders, and it is at present a pioneer in its establishment of a clubhouse in Winter Park, Fla., for the use of the alumnae.

The local group at George Washington has had many outstanding women during the past year. Miss Eleanor Sherburne has been selected as the "university sweetheart;" Miss McNeese, elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa and also chosen with Miss Mitchell as one of the most outstanding seniors on the campus, and Miss June Booth Stan, chosen second in the university beauty contest.

Ruby Black Elected to Head Press Women

Bess Furman, Vesta Cummings Named to Office

The Women's National Press Club yesterday elected Ruby Black as its president for the coming year. Miss Black, who succeeds Hope Ridings Miller, society editor of The Post, conducts her own news service and also does special work for the United Press.

She has previously served as national president of Theta Sigma Phi, national journalistic fraternity. Miss Black is a graduate of the University of Texas, and, before coming to Washington, did newspaper work in that State, in Madison, Wis., and St. Louis. She also writes for national magazines.

Other new officers, elected without opposition, were Bess Furman, special writer, first vice president; Vesta Cummings, of the Star, second vice president; Christine Sadler, of The Post, recording secretary; Mary V. Johnson, of Time Magazine, corresponding secretary, and Josephine Hemphill, of the Department of Agriculture, treasurer. The three members of the board of governors elected were Mrs. Miller, Isabel Kinnear Griffin, associated with her husband in the Griffin News Service, and Una Franklin, of the Times-Herald.

The polls were open from 9 a. m. to 6:30 p. m., in the Cabinet room of the Willard Hotel, where the weekly luncheons of the club are held. A dinner meeting followed, at which Mrs. Miller presided, turning over the gavel to Miss Black as the new president at the close.

Two of three proposed amendments to the constitution were defeated. The one was designed to admit to membership reporters for radio news services and the other, to admit women at the head of Government press relations departments and their assistants without the restriction now in force, requiring two years' previous experience on a newspaper.

A third amendment, which passed, opens membership to women on magazines other than trade journals.

A feature of the meeting was the fingerprinting of the members by a representative from the Department of Justice. This was arranged because of the fact that all writers who cover the visit of the British sovereigns must have their fingerprints on record and many of the club members are included in this group.

Hitler Greets 18,000 Sent To Aid Franco

Says He Has Rewarded Spain for Neutrality In World Conflict

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 6.—Chancellor Hitler welcomed home today 18,000 soldiers he had sent to the Spanish civil war and described the expedition as a reward for Spain's neutrality in the World War "despite all racketeering attempts on England's part."

The Reichsfuehrer spoke freely for the first time of Nationalist Leader Franco's "struggle for the rescue of Spain" and said:

"He was facing a conspiracy which was fed from all parts of the world. In July, 1936, I decided immediately to fulfill an appeal for help which this man addressed to me to such an extent and for just as long as the rest of the world gave its support of the internal enemies of Spain.

"I ordered this in the belief that not only Europe but also our own fatherland would be spared a similar catastrophe later. On the other hand, however, I did it out of deep sympathy for the sufferings of a country which, despite all racketeering attempts on England's part, remained neutral and friendly toward us in the World War. Herewith I rendered the thanks of the German people."

The soldiers, deeply tanned and in khaki uniforms, stood under a hot sun as Hiler addressed them from a tribunal in the Lustgarten. Above and on each side of the chancellor were some 350 memorial shields to those who died in Spain. They were held by members of the Hitler Youth Organization. Each shield bore the name of a fallen soldier within a golden wreath.

Referring to Italy's activity in Spain, the Fuehrer said their common cause was the "first joint practical demonstration of the ideological similarities between our two countries."

He added:

"These motives could neither be grasped among the international plutocracies nor were they admitted. For years British and French newspapers disseminated the lie among their readers that Germany and Italy had the intention to conquer and divide up Spain and, first of all, to rob her colonies. (Spain has African colonial possessions of 128,696 square miles and 934,686 population.)

"This trend of thought appeared less improbable to the representatives of these countries than to us, because the robbery of foreign colonies has always belonged to the tried and approved methods of these democracies."

Hitler said the example of the German Condor Legion should show the world that "if international war inciters should ever realize their intentions to attack the German Reich," they would meet a defense "such as the proponents of encirclement do not have imagination enough to grasp."

He accused politicians and newspapers of democratic countries of trying to "spread this catastrophe outside Spain" and "provoke a new, great European people's war."

20,000 Italians Home

Naples, June 6 (AP).—The last of returning Italian legionnaires were welcomed home by King Vittorio Emanuele today and afterward enjoyed their first night of relaxation and gaiety on native soil after months of fighting and army discipline in Spain.

The 20,000 troops marched in review before the monarch. Beside him stood Ramon Serrano Suner, brother-in-law of Generalissimo Francisco Franco and Spanish interior minister; Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, and Brig. Gen. Gastone Gambara, commander of the legionnaires. The United States was represented at the review by Consul William E. DeCourcy.

1940 Talk Leaves Roosevelt Silent

came soon after Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of New York, carried the third-term issue to the floor of the House in a demand that the party "ignore the third-term myth."

Citing writings and statements of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and other notable American figures to show they were unopposed to third terms, Kennedy said:

"The major concern now is whether the country shall or shall not chart its economic course in the direction set by the New Deal. That decision rests with the people and their relations with President Roosevelt."

The Day's Politics

Other political developments:

[Mayor Maury Maverick of San Antonio, Tex., former member of Congress, declared he will not support Vice President Garner for the 1940 Democratic Presidential nomination, "and there's a hell of a lot more just like me in Texas." He said he was for a third term for Roosevelt.

[In an interview at Cleveland, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, asserted President Roosevelt could win a third term if he wanted it, but added he couldn't imgaine anyone wanting the job.

[At Albuquerque, N. Mex., Secretary Ickes disclaimed he was leading a campaign to re-elect the President and said his magazine article spoke for "nobody but myself."

[Hudson County, New Jersey, Young Republicans incorporated the W. Warren Barbour for President Club, to work for the 1940 nomination of that State's Senator.

[Representative Mason (Republican, Illinois, urged his party to nominate Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, and District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, respectively, for the Presidency and Vice Presidency.

[The Democratic National Committee announced Postmaster General Farley would make a radio address tonight discussing the heavy Republican vote for the Townsend old age pension plan in the House last week.—Editor's note.]

Ickes' reference to some White House candidates who have engaged in "traitorous knifing in the back" of Mr. Roosevelt failed to rouse those Democrats who are supporting Garner's Presidential boom. Some columnists had interpreted this remark as an indirect slap at Garner.

"We would rather have Ickes attack Jack Garner's candidacy than support it," was the way one Texan put it. "Ickes knows he will lose his job the moment Mr. Roosevelt leaves the White House. And every time Ickes attacks Garner, the Vice President's popularity jumps higher."

Many political figures who have paraded to the White House in recent months have told the President he could be re-elected in 1940, but they departed with no indication of what course he will choose.

Spared Embarrassment

Calling off of the pickets not only obviates what might have proved an embarrassment to the King and Queen of England—the procession tomorrow from Union Station will pass several Federal building projects—but also simplifies dedicatory exercises at the new Scottish Rite Temple at Sixteenth street and Columbia road tomorrow.

As for the city's union bakers, efforts to iron out wage schedules in the last few weeks have been unsuccessful. Whether or not they will walk out depends upon a ballot to be taken tomorrow.

soul, who has waged the war for labor's rights from behind iron bars for more than two decades."

Previously, Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, who presided, called Mooney "the victim of a plot."

Mooney, as "a loyal member of the American Federation of Labor," greeted "the leaders and members of the C. I. O." He said labor's division was one of American democracy's greatest threats. Labor can be united around specific issues, he continued, pointing to the defeat in San Francisco of a proposed antipicketing ordinance. He cited the division of labor as permitting the passage of "vicious" laws in Oregon and the election of a "reactionary governor" and Legislature in Pennsylvania which threatened the destruction of the "splendid labor laws of that State."

Last night's appearance was sponsored by the Washington Tom Mooney committee. He will also appear Friday morning at a labor union session of the National Right-to-Work Congress in the Governmental Auditorium.

Coast Guard To Control Lighthouses

Service Personnel To Go From Civil To Military Status, Officials Report

Practically the entire personnel of the Lighthouse Service will change from civilian to military status when that agency merges with the Coast Guard, officials said yesterday.

Higher ranking civil service employes will receive commissions as officers of the Coast Guard, while those in the lower brackets will become warrant officers or enlisted men, under consolidation plans now being whipped into shape. Legislation will be needed to effect some phases of the program, it was said, but it will go to Congress with the full force of Administration approval.

President Roosevelt, officials said, personally directed that a complete merger be effected and the civilians be given military appointments. When the consolidation of the two services was first announced, both groups expected that the Lighthouse Service would remain as an entitl and operate as a division of the Coast Guard.

Move Protested

Some protests against the move have already been received in Congress from Lighthouse employes in the field. The idea of going to bed some night in the near future a civilian, and waking up the next day an officer or enlisted man of the armed services has struck some of them rather forcibly, it is said. The Coast Guard, it is pointed out, automatically becomes part of the Navy in time of war.

Bureau of Lighthouse officials fought to retain theidentity of their service, which was to have celebrated its 150th anniversary this August, but are now obeying the President's orders and are co-operating in the move.

Details of the plan are not yet complete, but it is expected that all physically fit civil employes, except unclassified laborers and clerks in the Bureau here will be given military rank. It is not yet decided whether those not found fit will be retired or continued in a civilian status. However, it is probable that men refusing to accept appointment or enlistment will be let out.

Clerical employes in the Bureau of Lighthouses of the Department of Commerce will transfer in grade to Coast Guard Headquarters July 1. The other 5,000 employes of the service under the plan later will be taken into the commissioned or enlisted rank that compares with their present civil pay grade.

Civil Service Extension

The Rules Committee of the House yesterday cleared the way for consideration of the Ramspeck bill aimed at a vast extension of the civil service.

Two hours of general debate were allowed by the committee, although the bill's author had requested but one hour. The bill would bring thousands of exempt positions into the merit system and would extend the classification act to the field services of the Government.

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, predicted the House would not vote to extend the Civil Service in view "of the way it has been administered." He said "it was common knowledge that the Civil Service has fallen under the influence of radical elements."

Among the agencies to which the President would be empowered to extend Civil Service are the RFC, PWA, CCC, TVA, AAA, FHA, HOLC, San Francisco and New York Fair Commissions, NYA, National Emergency Council, FSA, NRC and some others.

Luther C. Steward, president, National Federation of Federal Employes, commented on the committee's action, as follows:

"The Rules Committee of the House is deserving of high praise for its favorable vote on Representative Ramspeck's request" for the rule. "To Representative Ramspeck is due the thanks of all those who are concerned in this vital cause, for he has been tireless in his efforts to place this measure on the statute books."

28 States and Puerto Rico Are Represented

Degrees were granted by Trinity College to 86 girls from 28 states and Puerto Rico yesterday at exercises in the Notre Dame Auditorium. Of the graduates 18 were residents of Washington, while one Washington girl, Eileen Walsh, received the Sister Mary Cecelia Award in mathematics, and a fellowship in mathematics to Catholic University.

The most Rev. JJohn L. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore, handed the degrees to the candidates, who were presented to him by Mgr. John A. Frances Taylor Patterson, an alumna of the college and professor at Columbia University in New York, was the commencement speaker. She told the girls to "save time for a purpose," regarding time saved as invested rather than hoarded. "Some people kill time by trying to save it," she said.

Margaret Gorman was graduated magna cum laude, and Rosemary Gorman, her sister, was graduated with distinction in chemistry. They are from Kingston, N. Y.

Hagerstown Area Sees Apple Crop Far Subnormal

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, June 6.—A bumper peach crop but an apple crop that may be as little as 15 per cent of normal, were forecast by growers in Washington County. Growers say the same conditions exist in the Virginia apple producing area. Rainy weather during the first week in May when the apple trees were in full blossom, and the failure of the bloom being properly pollenized is blamed for the short apple crop. Peach trees are full of fruit.

Veterans Vote AgainstChange In U.S. Anthem

'The Star-Spangled Banner' Is Upheld At Marne Day Here

"The Star-Spangled Banner" is good enough as a national anthem for the "boys" of the Third Division, American Expeditionary Force, who 21 years ago were holding a section of the allied lines in France. They so decided last night at a "Marne Day" meeting of the Washington Third Division Society at 1304 North Capitol street.

A delegation of the society will attend the division's annual convention in Brooklyn from July 3 to 8, instructed to vote against any change in the official designation of Francis Scott Key's song.

Maj. Gen. Peter C. Harris, retired, former adjutant general, whose son, Capt. David Harris, died as a result of wounds received with the Sixth Engineers of the division, was honored guest last night. The only other one of the 60 diners who had not seen action with the division in France was John B. Diekman, president of the District of Columbia Typographical Union. Dickman's brother, Maj. Gen. Joseph T. Dickman, commanded the Third Division.

William A. Shomaker, 3811 Twenty-fifth street northeast, president of the Washington society, presided. Harry Cedar, of Arlington, Va., assisted, as secretary. Among those attending who had been cited for gallantry in action were George W. Sartain, of 641 Morris street, holder of the Distinguished Service Cross, and William A. Link, of the Order of the Purple Heart.

Oh, Mr. Roosevelt, The Tourists Wait

President Roosevelt yesterday unwittingly tested the patience of a group of tourists when he held up the regular morning procession through the White House while he received the new Russian and Spanish ambassadors, Constantine A. Oumansky and Juan de Cardenas.

Since the ambassadors presented their credentials at the house proper, it was necessary to hold back the tourist line.

Faiths Unite In Symposium At Greenbelt

Catholic Educator Urges Understanding And Not 'Tolerance'

Representatives of the Catholic, Protestant, Jewish, and Mormon faiths last night urged social justice among races and creeds in a symposium at the Greenbelt Community Theater.

Speaking to more than 500 Greenbelt residents the Very Rev. Dr. Ignatius Smith, dean of the School of Philosophy of Catholic University, declared members of different faiths should not look on each other with "tolerance" but with bona fide respect and understanding.

Urging social as well as religious justice, he declared it the "inescapable duty" of fortunate individuals and races to aid those less fortunate.

The Rev. John W. Rustin, pastor of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, declared "we cannot solve this country's problems by maintaining social and religious prejudice."

Also stressing the need for world religions and social equality were Rabbi Edward L. Israel, of the Synagogue Council of America, and Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah.

Lady Astor Taunted On Her 'Fine Linen'

London, June 6.—Viscountess Astor, once Nancy Langhorn of Virginia, indulged in sharp retorts in the House of Commons today when J. J. Lawson, a Laborite, taunted her with "wearing fine linen."

The incident occurred in the course of Lawson's speech in opposition to the unemployment insurance bill.

Tydings Calls Housing Plans 'Socialism'

Charges Authority's Projects Are Paid Entirely by U. S.

The United States Housing Authority's slum clearance program was attacked in the Senate yesterday as "state socialism" by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, who charged the Government is paying the entire cost.

Tydings opened his assault as the Senate called up the Wagner bill to increase the borrowing power of the United States Housing Authority from $800,000,000 to $1,600,000,000 and to raise the annual Federal contribution for rental subsidies by $45,000,000.

The Maryland Senator was joined in his critical attack by Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, while Senator Wagner, of New York; Senator Ellender, of Louisiana, and Senator Schwellenbach, of Washington (Democrats), defended the measure.

"Out of the Treasury"

Charging "we are building these projects entirely out of the Federal Treasury," Tydings challenged contentions that local authorities put up to 10 per cent of construction costs in cash and repay the other 90 per cent borrowed from the Federal Government, with interest at approximately 3 per cent.

"First of all, when the city wants to build a million-dollar housing project it puts up $100,000. The Federal Government then puts up $900,000 in the form of a so-called loan; and the $900,000 plus the $100,000 make the $1,000,000 with which the project is to be constructed.

"But at the same time that the housing authority lends this money to the city—namely, $900,000—it makes a contract with the city wherein it agrees to give to the city each year for 60 years a rent subsidy of a certain amount; and in every case the amount of money which the housing authority agrees to pay the city annually as a subsidy is sufficient to enable the city to give back to the housing authority, and thus to liquidate its proportionate part of the loan for that year, and the city has enough left over to liquidate the 10 per cent which it originally put up."

Ellender disputed the point, insisting the cities put up at least 10 per cent. The Louisianan contended rental subsidies made possible a "cut of 50 per cent in the rents of needy persons." When Schwellenbach likewise argued that the subsidies were passed along in the form of rent reductions, Tydings replied that the tenants' rent did not return to the Treasury and the Government was still bearing the entire cost.

Green Praises Program

Wagner introduced a letter indorsing the program from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Senator Taft said in a statement that if the objections of Administrator Nathan Straus were accepted, "the ultimate cost of housing 4,500,000 families under the present formula would be about $18,000,000,000 and would involve a subsidy of from $500,000,000 to $700,000,000 per annum from the Federal Government.

Pointing out that annual Federal subsidies average $158 a family, Taft said the pending bill would commit the Government to $73,000,000 annually in subsidies for 60 years, or a total of $4,380,000,000. He said this would provide homes for only 402,000 families, whereas he said Straus testified 4,500,000 ultimately should be housed by such a program. Taft maintained even that would not solve the problem if it is true that one-third of the Nation is poorly clothed, housed and nourished.

Assails Administration Farm Policies in Address at Y. W. C. A.

Representative Murray (Republican), of Wisconsin, launched an attack on the Administration's agricultural policies last night at a meeting of Potomac Grange No. 1, National Grange, in the Y. W. C. A.

"The Farm Security Administration, for example," he said, "is a device whereby when the farmer has lost his farm, it can be sold to the hired man." He also analyzed unfavorably agricultural legislation.

Francis Pickens Miller, Virginia Delegate, devoted his remarks to an exposition of American democratic principles, which, he said, should be cultivated and protected against the "poisonous fertilization of alien isms."

Guests inluded Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas; Representative Rutherford (Republican), of Pennsylvania; Representative Rodgers (Republican), of Pennsylvania; Representative White (Democrat), of Idaho; Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, and Representative Brewster(Republican, of Maine.

F. B. Wise was chairman of the program committee. Kirk E. Wallace acted as toastmaster.

Pine Foresees Bigger Court Jam Than Last Year

District Attorney Pine said yesterday that all the 185 criminal cases now pending have been set for trial this month, but he feared that when District Court adjourns for the summer there will be more unsettled cases than the 110 carried over last year. Indictments presented this month will be worked into the schedule for trial wherever possible, he said.

Justice Proctor, in addition to his court duties, is preparing an opinion on the demurrer of the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society to the Government's criminal conspiracy prosecution.

Justice Laws will suspend his criminal sessions the latter part of the week, as he must attended the Fourth Federal Circuit judicial conference at Asheville, N. C.

Stop Garner, Right to Work Congress Asks

Southerners Take Lead in Denouncing Texan for President

"Stop Garner in 1940" was the cry of delegates to the Right to Work Congress yesterday afternoon, when 100 Southerners took the lead away from the steering committee and won cheering indorsement for their resolution rejecting the Vice President as a candidate for the Presidential nomination.

Speakers denounced Garner as the leader of a "group of Southern big landowners who think only in terms of the exploitation of the poverty stricken mass of the people," before the 750 delegates meeting in the Labor Department auditorium.

President Roosevelt was pointed to as the model for a 1940 candidate by the group.

The Congress was called by the Workers' Alliance of America.

Seek More Relief

All yesterday morning the delegates filled the halls of the Capitol and the Senate and House Office Buildings, seeking the support of their Congressmen for increased WPA appropriations.

"American democracy is dead," Dr Harry F. Ward, chairman of the American Civil Liberties Union and the American League for Peace and Democracy, declared yesterday afternoon, "unless the right to work can be validated under decent conditions."

Discrimination against colored unemployed was charged by John P. Davis, executive secretary of the National Negro Congress and vice president of the Southern Conference of Human Welfare.

Robert Hanchen, executive secretary of the Farm Research Bureau, placed the hope of the farmers in the growth of the national income to $80,000,000,000.

Meet Tom Mooney

Californians and members of the steering committee of the congress, in the morning, met Tom Mooney at Union Station. Mooney is to address the Trade Union session of the congress on Friday morning.

Representative Woodrum's House Committee to Investigate the WPA was termed a "carnival of malicious slander" last night by the Right to Work Congress, adopting as a resolution the report of its committee to investigate the investigating committees.

Earlier, Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of the Methodist Diocese of New York, concluded an address before the evening session with a ringing appeal for "simple reliance on the worth of the human in this world."

The final act of the Conference on Unemployment and Religious Responsibility, declaring the inadequacy of present relief appropriations and the responsibility of the churches to work for their increase was read to the delegates amid cheers by the Rev. Willard Uuhaus, executive secretary of the National Religion and Labor Foundation, sponsors of the conference.

Hikers to Visit Fort Kemble Today

A mid-week nature walk through Fort Kemble Parkway, led by D. E. McHenry, park naturalist, will be held this morning, Frank T. Gartside, acting supterintendent of National Capital Parks, announced yesterday. Persons wishing to take the hike will meet at 9:30 a. m. at Conduit road and Chain Bridge road.

Religious Parley Urges More Relief

Coffey and Casey Bills Are Indorsed; Federal Theater Projects Defended

America's efforts to check dictatorships in foreign countries should not blind it to the spread of "industrial dictatorships" here, executive vice president of Labor's Nonpartisan League, yesterday told the Conference on Unemployment and Religious Responsibility.

Sponsored by the National Religious and Labor Foundation, the Conference urged passage of the Coffee bill, which restores the cut in the WPA and gives employment to 800,000 discharged workers, and also agreed that "the present provisions for relief are not adequate and that a constructive approach requires a permanent Government program, planned on a long-range basis."

Howard Hunter Speaks

The conference, which heard Howard O. Hunter, deputy administrator of the WPA, discuss the Federal Government's responsibility toward unemployment, also urged passage of the Casey bill, which would provide a program for relief of unemployment.

"Our religious responsibility toward unemployment" was stressed by the luncheon speakers, among them Dorothy Day, editor of the Catholic Worker, New York; Rabbi Edward L. Isreal, of Baltimore, and Prof. Albert Mollegen, of the Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Representative Kent Keller, of Illinois; Dr. S. D. Collins, of the National Health Survey; Dr. Howard A. Dawson, rural education specialist of the National Education Association, and Miss Elizabeth Christman, secretary of the National Women's Trade Union, also spoke.

Defends Federal Theater

The conference also "deplored the present move in Congress and other circles to curtail the Federal Theater, and belittle its contributions to democratic art in America. This project has brought the theater to thousands who cannot afford the commercial theater, and has given employment to many deserving actors, and kept alive its skill."

The local sponsoring committee included Dr. William S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, and president of the Washington Ministerial Union; Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church; Albion Hartwell, of Labor's Nonpartisan League; Grady Leonard, social action chairman of the Brotherhood of Service, and the Rev. George A. Ackerly, associate pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

'Invitation to Happiness' Is Unique 'Fight' Film

Dunne, MacMurray Star in Emotional Drama; New 'March of Time' Exposes Propaganda; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

ALTHOUGH IT HAS the prize ring as its background and chief source of motivation, Paramount's production of "Invitation to Happiness," previewed by the drama desks yesterday afternoon, under Loew auspices, is anything but the usual sort of "prize-fight picture." It is, on the contrary, a mature, intelligent and, at times, deeply moving study in conflicting personalities, psychologies and a deep and abiding love.

BELL

A cursory resume of the plot sequences that alternate between the fight racket in most of its familiar manifestations and the home of a young woman, inured to all of the luxuries of great wealth, might sound a little too much like "The Prize Fighter and the Lady" to give any adequate notion of the completely different approach this Wesley Ruggles production makes to the problems presented by what ought to have been a mesalliance, but wasn't. So we will omit that.

When the rich Mr. Wayne buys a half interest in "King" Cole, the country's most promising heavyweight, to help an old friend out of financial difficulties, Eleanor Wayne steps in as her father's "manager" and does everything in her power to break up the deal. She even pursues the handsome young pugilist to his favorite brooding place on the banks of the Hudson, overlooking Palisades Park, over on the Jersey side, to tell him precisely what she thinks of him. He also tells her what he thinks of her and her kind. Out of this strange conflict of viewpoints between the rich girl and the boy from the wrong side of the tracks there springs a great and sudden love. So they marry.

During the next ten years, "King" Cole fights his way around the country, working his way up to a shot at the championship. He sees his wife and their small son every six months or so and then only briefly. His son hardly knows him at the age of 10. Then comes the inevitable suit for divorce and custody of the child, just as the "King" is matched with the champ. The drama here becomes far more psychological than pugilistic, although the picture ends with as rousing a boxing bout as anyone would care to see on the screen—in which Cole is flattened because his devotion to his son and his determination to win his affection during six months of custody of the child have interfered fatally with his training for the fight. How it all comes out you will want to see for yourself when the picture comes along to a Loew screen, as it will in the comparatively near future.

Glorifies Psychology of Defeat

But the point is that out of these familiar materials Producer-Director Wesley Ruggles has evolved a drama that subordinates pugilism and the raucous business of the ring to a deep and fine study of human emotions and the problems they can precipitate that will carry an especial appeal for feminine audiences and should interest the weaker sex no less.

"Invitation to Happiness" is splendidly played. Irene Dunne, as the rich wife of the lad who never even got to high school, has no songs to sing, but does a piece of "straight" acting that is as poignant and as effective as her role, say, in "Back Streets"—with the tragedy omitted. Fred MacMurray has never been better in his life than he is in the role of "King" Cole, the man who wanted to be champion but wanted the love of his son more. Charlie Ruggles, as his manager and trainer; William Collier, sr., as Mr. Wayne, and Master Billy Cook, as the sorely perplexed son in the case, complete the admirable cast.

This is the only film I am able to bring to mind that derives its major impact from a rational exposition of the psychology of defeat. You will want to see it when it comes along—which may not be for a few weeks yet.

I applaud the Cross Roads Players for their presence of mind and being good "troupers." At the Monday night opening of "Abie's Irish Rose," their first production of the season, the footlights went out early in the first act and left the stage in complete darkness, save for the dim glow of a backstage floor lamp. This disconcerting mishap might have thrown even a professional group off its stride, but the members of the Cross Roads cast proceeded as if nothing had happened and maintained the humor and the pace of the play until the lights came up again. It was a nice demonstration of the real spirit of the theater.

Yesterday's welcome visitor to the tesselated magnificence of the drama department was Mr. Barrett Kiesling, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's West Coast publicity staff. Mr. Kiesling is making one of his perennial whirls around the circle in the interest of better understanding between his company and the newspaper boys and girls who handle the theater. He comes laden down with brief cases, portfolios and whatnot, all packed with stories and "stills" bearing upon the virtues of M.-G.-M's forthcoming product.

The author of two or three books, a Coast-to-Coast commuter and an authority on the cinema, Mr. Kiesling is something akin to a shot in the arm. He tells you—and somehow you believe him.

Mr. Kiesling isn't feeling too well on this trip. Yesterday was only the second day he had worked since an attack of malaria confined him to a Memphis hospital for a fortnight. I hope he'll be feeling better from now on. Anyhow, he left me a lot of very elegant pictures that you will be seeing in print on this page from time to time.

So there comes another pretty postage card from Master J. Raymond Bell—no relation—Loew publicist, not on his way home from his prize-award jaunt to Yurrup. This is the legend it bears, scrawled in discouraged lead pencil: "hello, Nels—here's where I ran out of cash, ink and optimism." The handsome halftone on the reverse sid. is of the Casino at Monte Carlo!

The "March of Time," in its latest monthly issue, just released, presents an important and thought-provoking film story of "War, Peace and Propaganda," which shows on the screen many hitherto unpublicized details of one of the most extensive international sales campaigns in modern history—the efforts of foreign propagandists to win the friendship of the United States now, in 1939, against the day when this country's help may be needed to win a war in Europe. There may be no connection whatever between the two, but coinciding with the American tour of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, "War, Peace and Propaganda" would seem to be particularly timely.

Standing-on-a-Soap-Box Note

By the way, where are you going to be when Their Majesties pass by tomorrow morning? Me, too.

The Heavyweight Makes His Grand Entrance

MARION MARTIN, FRED MacMURRAY, IRENE DUNNE

about to do a little night-clubbing, with feminine fireworks on the side, in Paramount's production of "Invitation to Happiness," a different sort of story of the prize ring. Charlie Ruggles, William Collier, sr., and Master Billy Cook complete the roster of principals in a picture that develops a new psychology of love and defeat. It will be coming along soon to a Loew screen

Surprise Film Seeks to Enlist High Official

Attorney General Is Sought for Part in Prison Picture

By Frederick C. Othman,

United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, June 6.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer dispatched one of its most persuasive representatives to Washington today to talk Attorney General Frank Murphy into becoming a movie actor.

If he doesn't succumb to the lure of yellow grease paint, Metro will be in something of a spot in connection with production of "They All Come Out." It may even have to run in an understudy, by name of Homer S. Cummings. If Murphy does accept the part, Cummings, the former Attorney General who already has appeared before the cameras, will become the face on the cutting room floor.

The story behind this rigamarole goes to show at least how sometimes a movie comes to be made, almost by mistake.

Metro made a deal with Attorney General Cummings last year to produce a two-reeler, designed to show that Federal prisons aren't hell holes and that when an inmate is released he's a better man than when he went in.

Alcatraz Island Filmed

Cummings, whose chief interest long had been the rehabilitation of criminals, thought the idea was top-notch. He made an introductory speech for the film and then he ordered his turnkeys all over the country to let the cameramen behind the bars to make pictures. The Hollywood experts did their stuff at Atlanta, Leavenworth and many another Federal prison and were about to go home, when they learned to their everlasting joy that Cummings' carte blanche included Alcatraz.

No movie camera ever had been on this superprison for tough mugs, like Al Capone, hard by San Francisco's Golden Gate Bridge. So the cinematographers rushed to Alcatraz for the movie scoop of the decade.

The warden only let them shoot one afternoon, but they never wasted a minute. Nobody worried about the lighting, or the expressions on the actors' faces, or anything. The camera just ground as long as there was light.

The result was unique. We saw it in a studio projection room. There were scenes showing the bleak rock with its concrete buttresses and swirling ocean currents; shots of the gray-clad men marching to their work, and of them climbing down a steep row of granite steps and marching one by one past an electric eye arrangement to see whether they had any hack-saw blades in the seams of their clothes.

Perhaps 50 men walked by the eye and then one, with a dazed look on his face, caused the lights to flash and the bells to clang. A guard clamped a heavy hand on his shoulder and escorted him to—what? The other convicts continued their slow march to the mills.

When the studio chieftains saw what kind of film they had, they decided to turn the production into a full-length feature. They ordered writers to fix up a love story for one of the principals and added a plot with some dramatic sequences about the boy who went wrong and tangled with the cops.

Attorney General Wanted

This part of the picture, shot in the studio, will be spliced into the actual penitentiary scenes, and should turn into one of the most unusual movies Hollywood has made in a long time. If it's good entertainment, so much the better, but the chance to see even a glimpse of life inside dreaded Alcatraz should sell a lot of tickets.

The film is in production now, under direction of Jacques Tourneau, and with Rita Johnson, Tom Neal, Bernard Nedell and Edward Gargan taking the leading roles. Only trouble is that President Roosevelt accepted Attorney General Cummings' resignation after the production started.

He'd do all right, in a pinch, for the introductory remarks, but Metro wants Murphy. If he won't come to Hollywood, the studio is prepared to bring Hollywood to him. That's more than any other movie actor ever rated. Even Garbo had to go West.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 6 (INS).—Hold everything! Mickey Rooney is going to Europe and in style, too, with Sylvester, his valet and a trunk full of new clothes.

Mickey, you see, is the star of "A Yank at Eton" which M-G-M will make at the famous boys' school. He'll be in good company, too, for Virginia Weidler, who plays Norma Shearer's little girl in "The Women," is also to be sent abroad, with Billie Burke in the featured role.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Interesting the way M-G-M picks and chooses stories of the tradition-filled boys' schools in England for the subject matter of their foreign-made movies. So much time is necessary to lay the foundation for these British productions that Norman Taurog, who is to direct, will leave in August, a few weeks ahead of the cast, and I shall be surprised indeed if John Considine, jr., the producer, doesn't take a run across the pond just to see how Mickey is getting along.

The quints recaptivated the world after their recent visit to the King and Queen, with their kisses and their wrong-foot curtseys. So life again begins for them at 5 with a new movie This time, it's a short which RKO will film under the very appropriate title "Five Times Five." Alexander Woollcott will narrate the story, doing his amusing stint from New York. Darryl Zanuck, who has made feature-length pictures of the Dionne sisters since their birth, decided this year against another movie and, really, a short is more appropriate, since it would be difficult to get sufficient new material.

Mae West told me today that she won't make a movie until Universal gets the right story for her. She wants one with intestinal fortitude, but which at the same time is acceptable to the Hays office. Just back from a ten weeks tour of personal appearances, where she worked like a Trojan, singing, doing routines and following the hard-working vaudeville schedule, she was in conference most of the day. She'd like to do "Catherine the Great," but Mae says with business conditions the way they are now, she knows it would be too expensive even to consider. That coming from La West, is indeed a surprise, for when she was with Para her pictures cost pulenty of real dough.

Come Saturday, Judy Garland will celebrate her sixteenth birthday with cake, trimmings and all the accessories. Now that she has reached sweet 16, Louis Mayer has decided she's old enough to have a dramatic part, so "Looking After Sandy," a story by Margaret Turnbull, has been bought for her. In this, she plays a 16-year-old orphan gal, who moves into a large American family and wins all their hearts. Sounds sort of Mary Pickfordish, doesn't it? Maybe it is. Anyway, it is Judy's first dramatic part and it is not a musical, although she'll sing several songs.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: David Niven and Ethel Butterworth, a surprise combination at the Beverly Tropics; Ann Sheridan keeping dates with John Conte, good looking radio announcer; Helen Twelvetrees and Wally Gould appear night after night at Neville Fleeson's and it looks serious; were Bette Davis and George Brent quarreling after the Cissie Loftus recital, as several fans reported? Errol Flynn, Hollywood's gift to the tennis world, meets Stanley Briggs Sunday for the finals in the motion picture championship. Bets are on Mrs. Flynn's boy; Arleen Whelan called suddenly to Colorado by the unexpected death of her grandmother; Mrs. Pat O'Brien's son and Mrs. Stu Erwin's daughter lose their tonsils this week. Both mothers have taken rooms at the hospital; you would be that su.. sed if you knew who Elaine Barrie has been dining with at a secluded cafe; Joan Bennett glanss in tomorrow night from Mexico City after a yachting trip with the Leeds. Walter Wanger isn't making any secret of his delight that she is returning.

Lupe Velez, who is telling her intimate friends that she is in love again, returns from the Chez Paree engagement in Chicago Friday; was that really Theda Bara lunching at the Brown Derby? If so, she looks marvelous; Harold Lloyd's two young daughters had their first experience at a night club when their parents took them to the Cocoanut Grove; Binnie Barnes and Mike Frankovitch really acted as if they meant it at the Hawaiian Paradise; Helen Morgan opens tomorrow night at Marcels and it will be a full house; the Lee Traceys glimpsed at the House of Murphy on their way to Wilmington to look over Lee's yacht which he'll race to Honolulu; Pat Di Cicco and Andrea Leeds Troccing again. This time with no idea of eloping.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Heavy Prop Toll In Russ Revelry

A Russian Christmas eve celebration may be a gay and colorful affair, but it certainly wrecks a prop man's nerves.

Director Robert Florey was filming such an affair today for "Hotel Imperial," with Isa Miranda and Reginald Owen as the central figures.

It seems there is an old Russian custom that when one drinks a toast to the Czar one immediately dashed the glass on the floor to break it in order that it shall never be profaned with a toast to a lesser person.

At the end of the day Dick Brandow, the demon of the prop department on the picture, checked up.

Hope's First Job

Bob Hope, comedy star of "Some Like It Hot," got his start in the entertainment world through Fatty Arbuckle. The famous fat man brought a new show to Cleveland, Bob's home town, and young Hope persuaded Arbuckle to give him a job.

New Faces at the Roadside

"The Pioneer's Daughter" or "Perils of the Prairie," the "meller" which opens the Roadside's sixth season on Monday, June 12, will present in principal roles no less than seven new players. Ted Tiller, Natalie Core, Charles von Rosenberg, Eugene Johnson, Robert Carroll, Harland Crowell and James Garrett all were recruited from tryouts this spring.

Only one of these players is a native Washingtonian, and he is one of the best known of Washington's younger generation of theater-minded people. Theodore "Ted" Tiller made his debut back with the old Ramshead players playing child roles. And when still very young, he started "pulling strings." His marionettes were a Washington institution not so many years ago. In 1934 he placed second with his group in the one-act play tournament and the next year, first. Summer stock with various New England theaters, stock work in New York, a road tour in "Sailor, Beware," and even a fling at melodrama in the New York revival of "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl" are the highlights of his work outside Washington. Ted is even more interested in the writing end of show business. One of the five plays he has written since 1936 is to have a pre-Broadway try-out at the Starlight Theater, Pawling, N. Y., this summer.

The feminine "rookie," Natalie Core, has managed to crowd an equal amount of experience into a few years. A native of Pittsburgh, she studied drama at Carnegie Tech and at McGill University, Montreal. The past two summers, she has played at the famous Wharf Theater of Provincetown, Kan. She has been heard, but not seen, in radio dramas both in Pittsburgh and in Washington. She's a "canary," too, and managed to squeeze in night club engagements in New York, Pittsburgh and Montreal between stage appearances.

Two Texans, Charles von Rosenberg and James Garrett, gained their experience in the Lone Star State, the former at the University of Texas and the latter at Tarleton College.

Robert Carroll had his own stock company in Detroit after having played in stock in his home town, Winona Lake, Ind., in Detroit and in Chicago.

Eugene Johnson is an American University graduate and was a prominent member of the dramatic club there. Harland Crowell has divided his time between acting with local groups and listening to "swing" music. You may have heard him as the professor of swingology on a local beer program recently.

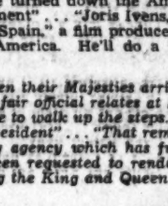
In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., June 6.—For discouraged actresses, I'd like to tell you the story of Nancy Carroll, a big star here in days gone by. She came out last winter to try for a comeback. The closest she came to fame was going boom, boom, with Mickey Rooney on the ice. Those pictures made all the magazines. She left in disgust, went back to New York where former hubby, Jack Kirkland, had a flop play on his hands. He begged Nancy to take a gamble and step into the star part. All right, she would, if he'd rewrite it and cut out the dirt, which he did. Now you can't get a seat for Nancy Carroll in "I Must Love Someone" She's the toast of the town!



HOPPER

Discouraged actors should remember the story of Bob Porterfield, who took a group of hungry players in an old broken down car to Virginia where they started the Barter Theater. In exchange for entertainment they were given food and shelter. Folks paid for plays with Virginia hams.

Once when there was a gangster roundup on Broadway, Bob was going quietly about his business taking a ham to Arthur Hopkins. Policeman nabbed him, thinking he had a sawed-off shot gun under his arm. Was the cop's face red when he found out Bob told the truth?

He's had the honor of presenting a ham and an acre of land to Laurette Taylor, who gave the outstanding performance in New York last year in "Outward Bound." Which she'll repeat for him in Virginia this summer.

Bob Leonard's working on the musical version of "Smilin' Through" for Jeanette MacDonald and hopes to persuade Robert Donat to come over and play opposite. Wouldn't that be a happy combination?

Nats Score Six Runs in Ninth to Win, 10-7

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, June 6.—Irrespective of how much Mr. Clark Griffith may be paying his Washington ball players, they are, as a group, the most overpaid club in the league. They are taking his money and profaning their profession with a lacklustre and zestless brand of baseball that finds Manager Bucky Harris on the point of firing his entire crew.

POVICH

The trouble with the American League is not the Yankees, but just such sort of ball players who are with the Nats—fireless, spiritless and strictly first-and-fifteenth performers. If you don't follow us, we'd better hurriedly explain that the first and fifteenth are pay days in the big league. They play for their pay checks and to hang with the general welfare of the club.

At least that's the impression you get if you are in the company with the Washington club these days. They have been losing ball games that would cause minor leaguers to blush with shame at the same brand of ineptness, but you'd never know from the smiling, grinning, why-worry countenances of the young business men who are wearing Washington uniforms.

How About a Good Steak?

They shed the unpleasantness of defeat as easily as a duck sheds drippings. Get mad about it? Shucks no. It's just another day's work done and if the club didn't win, well, somebody had to lose. By the way, what's on at the nearest movie? And here's hoping the steaks were better than they were last night. Only three more days to pay day, anyway.

No kidding, it's as bad as that. And Bucky Harris, a fellow who used to play ball to win when he was a ball player, is working up an intense hate for this ball club of his. He has handled too many ball clubs that liked to win, and lost bitterly when they lost. Some day, soon, there will be an explosion on the club with Harris setting it off.

There are only two regulars on the Washington ball club who apparently suffer any pain when the club gets licked. They are George Case and Bobby Estalella. They don't like it a bit, and the reason is that they play to win when they are out there. They play with fire and dash in striking contrast to the entire Nats' infield.

A Few Fine Exceptions

He isn't playing regularly, but Rookie Johnny Welaj is another exception among the Nats. The loss of a ball game makes a difference to him. There are two more bitter-enders on the club. They are Jimmy DeShong, who doesn't have a victory to show for himself this season, but who will battle to the last inch trying to get one, and the Venezuelan, Alexandra. Alex is downright butraged when the Nats get licked.

The rest—well, as far as Bucky Harris is concerned, you can have 'em, and that means the Nats' entire infield, their catching staff and most of the pitchers. They accept defeat not only too easily, but too nicely.

It may be significant that the Nats are composed, in the main, of Southern boys. They don't have the same dash, the same fire as the lads out of the coal mine districts and the industrial North. This may get us into trouble, but it's a fact, long established in big league baseball.

We know what the first rebuttal will be—how about Ty Cobb, the Georgia Peach? Sure, Cobb had it, was probably tops in fiery spirit, and Gerald Walker, of the White Sox, is a rootin', tootin' performer, and there probably are other dynamic ball players from the South, but they are in a distinct minority.

Yanks Are Real Yanks

The Southern boys have baseball ability, there's no dispute about that. In fact, the South probably boasts more big leaguers than any other section of the Nation has produced. But they get by chiefly on their mechanical ability. They don't steal so many bases for you, they don't knock you down on those close plays, and by and large, they lack an innate zest.

It's significant, too, that the New York Yankees have only one Southern ball player on the club that is making a runaway of the pennant race, although that particular one is Bill Dickey, a potent package. Who are the Yankees? Charley Ruffing, from Illinois; Lefty Gomez, from the Coast; Oral Hildebrand, from Indiana; Bump Hadley, from Lynn; Red Rolfe, from New Hampshire; Frank Crosetti, Joe Gordon and Joe DiMaggio, from the Coast; Tommy Henrich, from Minneapolis, and George Selkirk, a Canadian.

Any time Clark Griffith wants to sever his Southern league connections and get him some hate-to-lose guys from the North and West, it will be all right with Stanley Harris.

(Editor's Note—Povich is from Maine.)

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, June 6.—Young Harvey Firestone gave a party last night at his magnificent exhibition at the Fair. It was for Wilbur Shaw, the little guy who won the 500-mile Indianapolis race a week ago. But it was also pretty much of a treat for a sports writer, who only had to take a step one way or another to bunk into a newsworthy celebrity.

CONSIDINE

Shaw spoke to us about his retirement. He doesn't know just when it will come. "I'm going to quit racing the day I get this love of emergencies out of my blood," said the little man who this year raced past a dead man, and two burning cars, to win his second Benzine Derby. "Maybe this is the time to quit," reasoned the articulate fellow. "I've got enough money to live on the rest of my life, and I've done all I want to do in racing. But, I dunno . . . racing gets under your skin. And you don't give it up until you get your blocked knocked off, or you lose the kick of driving one of those things."

Shaw won't make as much out of winning this year's race as he made out of finishing second last year. He drove another fellow's car—a Maserati—and all his equipment except his tires was foreign made. Thus he'll lose all those accessory bonuses and prizes, which amount to as much as the Indianapolis prize.

He's a queer paradox, this Shaw. He's tough enough to be able to rub hubcaps around a bend at well over a hundred miles an hour, but he has a sentimental streak almost without parallel. For instance he never seems to have gotten over the awe produced by the fact that the tires, on which most of his success depends, are made from the juice of a tree and a puffy Southern cotton bulb. He speaks feelingly, too, of his emotions as he roared past Lou Meyer, who had him beaten this year with only three laps to go, but cracked up. He wonders, too, whether young Bob Swanson, a driver, will ever sleep peaceably again. Swanson climbed into Ralph Hepburn's car as a relief man, drove two laps and went into a spin. Floyd Roberts, the 1938 winner, crashed into him, turned over and was killed. Chet Miller, who had a chance to win, drove through the inner fence to keep from running over the uninjured Swanson—and now lies strapped to a board in an Indianapolis hospital.

Gene Tunney Talks Fights

Gene Tunney, who was honorary starter of the race, was at the Shaw party, and wanted to talk fights. He thinks that Baer quit as soon as Lou Nova opened the cut on his lip. "The way he acted on the way to his corner, after each round, convinces me that he wanted to get out of there," the former champion said. "Nova didn't win so much on his talent. He simply outgamed Max."

Gene thinks that Nova would be a chump not to fight Louis in September. "If he waits around a year somebody is likely to beat him. I don't think he's going to get better than he is now, because he's muscle bound. He'll have just as good a chance against Louis in September as he'll have 10 years from now. Because he's older than Joe is. Now's the time to fight Louis. Nova's hot stuff now. I think he can get 25 per cent of the gate now. But if he waits, and gets licked, he may never get a shot."

Tommy Hitchcock, wearing a bandage behind his right ear, was leaning against the bar at the party, nibbling on a soft drink. He shrugged when somebody asked him about his bandage. "I got it in the game Sunday. Somebody opened it with a mallet," the captain of the American team said. He enjoyed the battle against the British. "They're good rough fellows," he commented. He was a little disappointed, however, over the 11-7 score by which the Americans won. "We missed Cecil Smith a lot," he said. "I hope he'll be back next Sunday when we play them again. Then we should improve. You know that's the first time that combination of ours ever played together. I thought we were pretty ragged in spots. If those Englishmen had made half of their free shots they'd have beaten us."

Hagen Picks Guldahl for Open

Walter Hagen, baked to a bright reddish brown by his exposure to all that hot golf in the Goodall tournament, thinks that Ralph Guldahl is going to win the United States Open at Philadelphia this week.

"In a lot of ways that fellow is the most amazing golfer I've ever seen," said the Haig. "He's certainly got the greatest concentration any golfer ever had. That course down there is made for him, too, because it's a second shot course, and you won't find a better second shot player than Guldahl. I think you can throw out his last two days performance in the Goodall tournament. His dogs gave out, that's all. He'll be okay for the Open. I'd bet on him if he wasn't 6-to-1. Hell, no golf favorite ever should be less than 10-to-1."

Rick Ferrell Hits Double, Beats Browns

Blow Scores Three Runs; Estalella Hits Homer and Is Hero of Game With 4 Hits

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, June 6.—Off the bat of Rick Ferrell boomed a ninth-inning, nick-of-time two-bagger this afternoon with these multiple effects:

(1) It scored three Washington base runners to wipe out a 7-6 lead of the Browns.

(2) It broke Washington's four-game losing streak, and

(3) It won a 10-7 ball game.

The unpredictable Nats, apparently doomed to their fifth straight defeat, as they entered the ninth inning with a three-run deficit, began to act up immediately like some composite of all the great championship clubs of history. They splattered five hits all over the premises in the ninth and jammed six runs across the plate.

Back in the eighth inning, the Browns had made free with Dutch Leonard to score four runs and go into a 7-4 lead, but Left-handed Howard Mills, who was entrusted with that lead, made a woeful job of it in the ninth.

Estalella Is Hero

Bobby Estalella, who was something of a hero himself today, having swatted a home run and a double earlier in the game, led off that ninth by pounding a two-bagger against the leftfield wall and Buddy Lewis put the tying run on base by slamming a two-bagger against the rightfield wall, Estalella scoring.

Charley Gelbert, batting for Taft Wright, drew a walk, but the rally appeared doomed when Cecil Travis, attempting to sacrifice the tying run to third, bunted into a force play. Buddy Myer, however breathed new life into the uprising with a single to center, and Sammy West walked, to fill the bases.

At this point, Rock Ferrell got in his lick against Harry Kimberlin, St. Louis relief pitcher. With the count of 3 and 2, Ferrell lunged into a fast ball, heard the joyful thud as it smashed against the fence in right center for a double, and saw three of his pals cross the plate to put the Nats in a 9-to-7 lead.

Appleton Holds Browns

But the Nats weren't through. Leastwise, Estalella wasn't. After George Case drew a walk, Estalella pounded out his fourth hit of the

Braddock to Fight Farr in London

New York, June 6 (AP).—James J. Braddock, former world's heavyweight champion, accepted terms today to meet Tommy Farr, of Wales, in a 15-round fight in Earl's Court Stadium, London, July 5.

Braddock, Gould and a trainer will sail within ten days. Gould said Tony Canzoneri, former world's lightweight champion, will meet Egic Boone, British lightweight, in the semifinal.

Here's What Happens When Ickenham Cricketers Celebrate

These gentlemen are cricketers, so help us, and they are having at bit of a time celebrating the 300th anniversary of their sports club in Ickenham, England, by meeting an intrepid cricket crew of an artillery outfit. National Open Preliminary Scores High

Two Over Par Lowest Round Posted; Entries Tune Up for Test

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 6.—The 6,786 yards of the Philadelphia Country Club's Spring Mill course got a thorough going over today as the advance guard of 165 golfers tried out all the angles in preparation for the 43rd National Open Championship which starts on Thursday.

They weren't posting sub-par scores, very few of them in fact, were giving any scores. But on their way around they were playing two or three balls, testing the speed of the greens, figuring the wind that whipped over the sloping fairways, and experimenting with recoveries out of the tall rough and the yawning, glaring-white sand traps.

What few scores were turned in were strictly unofficial. Tommy Armour, the silver Scot from Chicago who won the title in 1927, toured the par 69 layout with Bobby Cruickshank, who fired a 71 at Armour's 72. Marvin (Bud) Ward, the slugging former Walker Cupper from Spokane, Wash., did as well as Armour. He had reason to be proud of it, for Denny Shute, the former P. G. A. champion was a stroke higher; Ky Laffoon and Ed Oliver reported 74's; Byron Nelson, one of the prime favorites, a 75, and Jug McSpaden a 79 with a 44 for the back nine.

Vic Ghezzi, husky professional from Deal, N. J., came in with a 71 that looked the better for following the one-under-par 68 he had scored yesterday.

'Break Up Yanks' Movement Hinted By Indians' Chief

Cleveland, June 6 (AP).—If the Yankees win the pennant by an "outlandish" margin this season, the Cleveland Indians' big chief said today, "club owners will attempt to correct by legislation some of the evils that make such one-club supremacy possible."

BRADLEY

President Alva Bradley of the Cleveland club, asserting he spoke only for himself, said the problem of a lop-sided pennant race might be solved through rules governing control of minor league affiliates.

Regulation of options and ownership of more than one club in each minor league classification might be open to correction, Bradley told a reporter.

"Take the case of this boy Joe Gallagher, whom the Yankees just optioned to Newark," said Bradley. "Now I suppose seven clubs in the league would be happy to have that fellow on their rosters. Yet the Yankees can send him back to the minors, because they have so many good outfielders that they don't need him.

"Now, I'm just thinking out loud, but what would be wrong with a rule requiring that any player who was kept with a major league club for 30 days could not be optioned to the minors until he had been waived out of the major leagues?"

Buck Newsom Checks Yanks, Tigers Win, 6-2

Champions Suffer Second Straight Defeat at Hands of Bengals; Allowed Four Hits by Detroit Hurler for Sixth Victory of Season

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 6.—The American League looked with respect toward Detroit today after the aroused Tigers slapped a second straight defeat, by 6-2, on the world champion New York Yankees.

For the second consecutive day they got four-hit pitching. This time it was Buck Newsom, late of the St. Louis Browns, who held the champions completely in check, to match Tommy Bridges' effort of the day before.

This marked the second time this year the Yankees have lost two in a row. They did it before when the Senators stopped them on April 29 and 30.

In the sixth the Tigers scored all their runs, knocking Oral Hildebrand off the mound. The Bengals bunched 4 of their 11 hits in that frame and had the added advantage of four bases on balls.

Newsom, fanning seven, chalked up his sixth victory of the season.

Wes Ferrell Tries Drastic Remedy On Pitching Arm

Charlotte, N. C., June 6 (AP).—Wes Ferrell, veteran big league hurler, recently released by the Yankees, has resorted to a drastic remedy in the hope of regaining the effectiveness of his pitching arm.

FERRELL

Roy Tinsley, of the Charlotte Country Club, said today that during a round of golf with Ferrell yesterday he noticed the 31-year-old right-hander caught honey bees from flowers, held them to his arm until they stung him.

When Ferrell finished the round his arm was swollen to almost twice normal size, Tinsley said.

"Its the only way that you can get that arthritis out of your arm when its sore," Ferreli replied when asked for an explanation.

Ferrell says he's dickening for a job with a club in the Pacific Coast League.

By the United Press.

Cleveland, June 6.—Five runs behind, the Cleveland Indians rallied in the last two innings today, sent Eldon Auker to the showers and downed the Boston Red Sox, 8 to 7, to take the series, three games to one.

With the score tied, 7-7, in the ninth Ben Chapman doubled for his third hit of the game. Jeff Heath drew an intentional walk from Joe Heving, the losing pitcher, and Oscar Grimes blasted a double for the winning tally.

New Yorkers Smash Five In Fourth

Clouts Come After 2 Are Out; Reds Victims Of Vicious Attack; Vander Meer Routed

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 6.—The New York Giants, booed heartily yesterday, reached baseball heights today in setting one major league home-run record and equaling another, as they smashed the first-place Cincinnati Reds under by 17-3 in their most vicious attack of the year.

The new record came in the fourth inning when five Giants—Harry Danning, Frank Demaree, Burgess Whitehead, Manuel Salvo and Joe Moore hit for the circuit. Previously the major league mark for homers was four in one inning, set by the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1894 and not equaled until the Chicago Cubs came through with a similar performance in 1930.

The record for seven homers in one game—before that big fourth inning Joe Moore and Mel Ott had connected for four base blows—tied a record held jointly by the Detroit (National League) Club of 1886, the Philadelphia Athletics of 1921 and the Pittsburgh Pirates of 1894.

All After Two Are Out

Danning opened then, with his sixth homer of the year. After Ott Walked and Zeke Bonura singled, Demaree knocked one out of the park.

That ended Peaches Davis' stint on the mound and Wes Livengood came in. He walked Tony Lazzeri and pitched a home-run ball to Burgess Whitehead. It was his first of the year. Then Salvo, the winning pitcher, slammed a ball high against the rightfield wall, and minutes later Joe Moore came through with his second of the game.

Danning struck out to end the slaughter.

The Giants, at the time they broke loose with this history-making barrage, had a comfortable 6-to-0 lead, they had knocked Johnny (Double No Hit) Vander Meer out of the box in the first inning with a 3-run blast, added 1 in the second—that was Moore's first homer—and had counted twice in the third, one of them Ott's homer.

Giants Score More

After the big blast the Giants weren't completely worn out and managed to push across 3 more runs in the fifth—but that was all they could do.

Hitz had 77, 79 for two of his four medal-play rounds, while Mason started with 77, 76, but went up to 82 on his third trip. George Wheeler and Kent Legg had 80 and Reeve Lewis 79.

Humphrey's Speed Is 8 Feet Faster Than Bob Feller's

Cleveland, June 6 (AP).—Three Boston Red Sox threw a baseball 122 feet a second into a new photo-electric pitching meter today. Three Cleveland Indians could do only 119 feet.

Pitchers were not included in today's test but "unofficially," Bob Feller, of Cleveland, threw three balls into the meter from a distance of 20 feet. The best mark he recorded was 119 feet. His less-touted teammate, Pitcher Johnny Humphreys, recorded 127 feet. There will be a contest for pitchers later.

Jimmy Fox, Jim Tabor and Roger Cramer made it a clean Boston sweep with a first-place tie in today's fielders' contest.

The best the Indians could do was a tie at 119 feet by Ben Chapman, Julius Solters and Jim Shilling.

Cleveland men who developed the speed meter said the only comparable scientific marks were made in 1917. Walter Johnson threw the ball 134 feet a second, Christy Mathewson 127 and "Smoky Joe" Wood 124. Their speeds were shown by a gravity drop interval recorder.

Shore and Adair Pace Advance in Washington Tennis

Farrin, Johnsen, Lindjem, Smith, Stocklinski, Lynch Win Quarter-Finals

By Jack Munhall.

Frank Shore and Ralph (Buddy) Adair, Edgemoor Club's twin "dark horses" in the annual City of Washington men's tournament, loomed even more menacing today following convincing quarter-final victories on the home courts yesterday.

Shore, playing good tennis and capitalizing on the spiritless opposition offered by Billy Turner, walloped the sixth-ranking junior star, 6—1, 6—0, while husky Adair was upsetting third-seeded Ricky Willis, 9—7 6—0.

Shore and Adair thereby joined defending champion Hugh Lynch, second-seeded Lieut. Jim Farrin, and sixth-seeded Davie Johnsen, who won yesterday and Neil Lindjem, Alphonso Smith and Ray Stocklinski, who were victorious Monday, in the round of eight.

Lieut. Farrin preserved his record of not having lost a set by turning back Tom Moorhead, 6—4, 6—4, in his quarter-final test. Johnsen, last year's junior champion, breezed by John Curran, 6—2, 6—4, and Lynch defeated Max Bost, 6—0, 6—2.

The only doubles match yesterday found defending champions Dooly Mitchell and Ralph McElvenny open defense of their title with a 6-0, 6-1 victory over Hudson and Lee to reach the quarter-finals.

Today's schedule consists of three doubles matches which will send the winners into the quarter-finals. In the first Johnsen and Lynch meet Shore and Alphonse Smith at 4:30. Then at 5:30 Mitchell and McElvenny engage Ed Mather and Dick Murphy, and Adair and Bill Breese face Nathan Askin and Allie Ritzenberg, Southern Conference champs.

Singles competition resumes Thursday with red-hot semi final matches. The feature will be the second tournament meeting of Buddy Adair and Davie Johnsen, Edgemoor Club members and keen rivals, in which Adair will seek revenge for the licking Davie gave him in their first encounter which was played in the Buckhill junior tournament several years ago.

This match at 4 o'clock co-opens the program together with the set to between Lieut. Farrin and Frank Shore.

MEN'S SINGLES
Third round—Davie Johnsen defeated John Curran, 6—4, 6—4; Frank Shore defeated Bill Turner, 6—1, 6—0; Buddy Adair defeated Ricky Willis, 9—7, 6—0; Hugh Lynch defeated Max Bost, 6—0, 6—2.

MEN'S DOUBLES
Second round—Dooley Mitchell and Ralph McElvenny defeated Hudson and Lee, 6—0, 6—1.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE

day, a single to left, and the Nats' sixth run of the inning scored.

Pete Appleton nursed the Nats' lead through the ninth, allowing one harmless hit to Pinch-Hitter Laabs and then retiring the next three batters in order.

The 676 spectators saw Estalella's first inning homer into the leftfield seats put the Nats in a 1-0 lead, but the Browns hopped in front, 2-1, in the same inning on a triple by Billy Sullivan. The Nats tied it at 2-2 in the second inning, when West and Ferrell singled, and were trailing, 3-2, at the end of the fifth, because Leonard had given up a run on three singles.

In the seventh, the Nats pushed two runs across the plate, thanks to Case's single and Estalella's two-bagger against the wall in left, but Leonard couldn't hold his lead. In the eighth, singles by Almada and Hoag, a safe bunt by McQuinn, a passed ball by Ferrell, a sacrifice fly and Berardino's triple to center moved four St. Louis runs home and the Browns were in front, 7-4.

Those were the figures when the Nats staged their ninth-inning act.

War Admiral's Racing Career Ends

Riddle to Retire Star 'Within the Next Few Days'

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Md., June 6.—War Admiral struck his colors today—the great thoroughbred son of Man o' War will go no more to the races.

Owner Samuel D. Riddle announced through William Whaley, manager of his Glen Riddle Farms, that the nemesis of 1937 3-year-olds would be retired to the stud "within the next few days."

Whaley said the Admiral had not rounded into form at Belmont Park after treatment for a rheumatic ailment. He will be shipped to Maryland shortly, ending the racing career of the gallant little son of Man o' War—Brushup who "tripled" in the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes of 1937, joining three other horses as wearers of the three-ply crown.

The little brown jugful of fight gave his outstanding display of racing courage in the '37 Belmont Stakes. The Admiral stumbled at the start and tore a bloody gash in his right forehoof. He recovered to win the grueling mile-and-a-half going away. In the winner's circle his underbody was splashed with blood from his wounded hoof.

The peewee speedball—he stood 15 hands 2¼ inches as a 4-year-old, a full hand smaller than his oversize daddy—was undefeated as a 3-year-old, and was voted by racing writers the outstanding thoroughbred of 1937.

WAR ADMIRAL

He copped the $50,000 Widener Cup at Hialeah in a breeze in the spring of '38. Other stakes victories included the Chesapeake, Eastern Shore Handicap, Washington Handicap, Pimlico Special, Jockey Club Gold Cup, Wilson Handicap, Whitney Stakes, Saratoga Cup and Saratoga Handicap.

War Admiral finished out of the money only once, at Suffolk Downs in the mud in 1938, when he chased Menow, Busy K. and War Ministrel to the wire.

The Admiral shared the spotlight, if not the glory, in the match test against Seabiscuit at Pimlico November 1, 1938. The two standout stake horses were finally brought together after a year of dickering, and the Biscuit came home four lengths in front, in track record time from a walk-up start.

War Admiral started three times in the winter season after the match race, and won all three.

He was unready for the '39 Widener at Hialeah and was scratched. He never went to the post again.

In 26 starts, the Riddle ball of fire won 21 races, placed three times, was third once and ran out of the money at Suffolk. He won $273,240.

New York, June 6.—Fred Fitzsimmons today hurled the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 5-to-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates and into a three-way tie with the Pirates and Chicago Cubs for third place in the National League standings.

Fitzsimmons scattered 10 hits and halted the Pirates when they threatened, while his own mates pounded Joe Brown for 12 hits, including a home run by Pete Coscarart, and sewed up the game with three runs in the fourth.

Little Joins Bulla In Quest of Open Title in England

Philadelphia, June 6 (AP).—The United States representation in the British Open Golf Championship, which opens at St. Andrews July 3, was doubled today when Lawson Little, former United States and British amateur titleholder, announced he would take a crack at the title now held by Reginald Whitcombe. The only other American who so far has announced he plans to play there is young Johnny Bulla, of Chicago.

LITTLE

Here to get in some practice rounds for the forty-third National Open which starts Thursday, Lawson said he would sail from New York June 14 aboard the Washington. He considers St. Andrews one of his "pets" for in his last appearance there, in 1934 Walker Cup matches, he soundly thumped Cyril Tolley, 9 and 5.

Little hasn't visited England since 1935, and when he won his second British amateur and then took fifth place in the open at Muirfield.

Interior Defeated By Maritime, 8-4

Though it outhit Maritime Commission, 9 to 5, yesterday, Interior Department was issued an 8 to 4 setback in the playoff of a postponed Departmental League baseball game on the Ellipse. The loss had no effect on first-half standings, I. D. R. A. already having locked up the title.

Four errors contributed to Interiors loss, as well as six walks issued by Pitcher Breed. Second Baseman Tirling was the only Maritime hitter with two safeties, while Gauzza, Bozek and Farrell each had a pair for the losers. Gauzza had a double and triple in four times.

Dietrich Wins 7-4 Victory Over Athletics

White Sox Hurler Has Homer, Single Besides Mound Work

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 6.—Knocked out in the third inning Sunday, Bill Dietrich came back today and pitched and hit the Chicago White Sox to a victory over his former Philadelphia Athletics teammates, 7 to 4. It gave Chicago the series, three games to one, and extended the Sox's spurt to five victories in six games.

Though weakening in the ninth, when Clint Brown relieved him, the bespectacled Dietrich pitched steadily through eight frames and scored the first runs of the game in the third inning with a homer into the leftfield pavilion after his battery mate, Tony Rensa, singled.

Outfielder Gee Walker also homered off George Caster, the A's starter, in the same inning after Ollie Bejma singled. Dietrich also singled to start the seventh. Bejma and Walker singled and Rip Radcliff doubled for the other Chicago runs.

Capitolettes Win Behind Jean Shanks

Jean Shanks, wife of the veteran softball pitcher, Orrel Shanks, struck out eight and gave up only seven hits last night as the Capitolettes won a Washington-Virginia Girls League softball game from Bureau of Engraving, 18 to 1. The victors registered 23 base hits, paced by three straight safeties for Betty Wood, and a pair of triples by "Pudgy" Herbert.

Cardinals Beat Bees on Error In Tenth, 5-3

Rookie Miller Allows Winning Run on Fumble And Wild Toss to First

By the United Press.

Boston, June 6.—Rookie Eddie Miller's two-ply error paved the way for the St. Louis Cardinals' 10-inning victory today over the Boston Bees, 5-3.

That highly polished shortstop allowed the Cards to fill the bases in the tenth by fumbling Pitcher Curt Davis' grounder and then his wild throw to first opened the gate for Don Gutteridge to cross with the winning run.

Until the extra inning, the game was a keen duel between Davis and Lefty Milburn Shoffner. The later had given the opposition nine hits and five passes during the regulation frames, but he had kept them scattered in all but the third and seventh innings.

The Bees, off to a one-run lead in the first, lost the advantage in the third, but regained it in the fifth with a two-run rally. The Cards tied it up in the seventh, thanks to the lusty pounding of Stu Martin, who hit safely his first five times at bat.

Phils Beat Cubs, 9-8 On Pinch Single

Philadelphia, June 6.—Pinky Whitney's pinch hit off Larry French scored George Scharein in the ninth inning today, to give the Phillies a 9-to-8 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Behind, 8 to 6, going into the ninth, the Phillies hit Gene Lillard and Jack Russell for four successive singles for two runs, to tie the score. Joe Marty started it off with a single to center, and got to third as Merrill May Singled off Bill Herman's glove into centerfield. Scharein's single scored Marty and put May on third. Chuck Klein singled over second off Russell, who relieved Lillard, to send May home and tie the score. Russell fanned Walter Beck and was replaced by French.

Whitney was the first man to face French and singled over second to score the winning run.

On Fishing

St. Jeromes Creek boats have really been taking the hardheads during the past week, and with them a fair sprinkling of trout. They were fishing, of course, on the Southwest and the Northwest Middles, noted feeding grounds some 9 miles out in the bay in a southeasterly direction from the creek.

ACKERMAN

Usually it is on these grounds that first croakers or hardheads are taken each spring. The same is true of bluefish, that in some years have been taken here as early as May 17. During the season, the big cobia or sargeant fish are often found here, and some of the finest catches of sea trout made anywhere in the bay country.

This year St. Jeromes has an excellent harbor, thanks to the dredging operations of the War Department last winter. Where only the shallowest draft boats under native guidance were able ot get in and out now boats drawing 6 feet can get through on dead low water. This is a convenience, not only for anglers who go in their own boats, but for small boats traveling up and down the bay. St. Jeromes is located about halfway between Solomons and Reedville on the Virginia shore, a long stretch of water which hitherto offered no haven for boats caught in bad weather.

There are some fine modern guide boats on St. Jeromes Creek. Capt. C. F. Willoughby has three, and Capt. Raub Drury and Capt. Taft Tippett each have two this year. The latter's new Bay Queen is just about the last word for fishing these waters.

Has Bait Problem

A reader wants know where he can get rowboats to enjoy his fishing, and at the same time wants to know just the right kind of bait to use. He says: "I have found that after being assured that bloodworms or shrimp was proper for certain kinds of fish, and securing a good supply, I found that the local folk were using cut herring. And the funny part of it, they caught fish and I didn't."

We have the idea—from the cut herring baits—that he was fishing up the river, where under normal conditions bloodworms are as good a bait as it is possible to get for rockfish, perch and the big catfish.

With a knowledge of bait so limited, it would hardly seem possible to take a rowboat and find the best places to fish. We would suggest a companion or two until this knowledge is obtained. If that is impossible, why not give us a ring any afternoon or evening, so that in direct conversation we might be able to find out just what you want and get you started off on the right foot.

Fallacy Cleared

Some fishermen have the idea that minnows are just small fish, both game and otherwise. This is not true. They are a distinct species and should not be confused with small game fish. It is seldom that adult minnows exceed 3 or 4 inches in length.

We note this because the laws are being tightened in most States in regard to their seining, possession and transportation. Where seining is allowed, any small game fish caught should be returned to the water without injury. It is only good conservation to handle your bait in a manner to keep losses low. If your minnow buckets are not supplied with aerators, the water should be changed frequently or the bucket immersed in the stream or pond. Any minnows remaining at the end of a fishing excursion should be carefully returned to the water, for they are natural food for game fish as well as bait for the hook.

It's Open Season On Bookies if You Live in St. Louis

By International News Service.

St. Louis, June 6.—And besides, bookmakers are fair game, United States District Attorney Harry C. Blanton said today as he refused to issue warrants against a woman and four men who alledgedly bilked a St. Louis bookie of $5,000.

Irving Lee charged the five obtained race results via short wave radio and bet from $20 to $40 on the winning horse a minute before he obtained the result by telephone.

Blanton said he found no evidence of violation of a Federal law and:

"I don't think it should be the public policy to prosecute anyone for skinning a bookmaker."

Brinkerhoff Wins Junior Tennis Title

Defeats Davie Kay, For Championship, Succeeding Johnsen

Harry Brinkerhoff, unseeded because his entry wasn't discovered until just before the first round matches, yesterday succeeded Davie Johnsen as District junior champion by romping to a straight set victory—8—6, 7—5, 6—0—over Davie Kay, also unseeded, in the finals of the City of Washington tournament at Columbia.

Brinkerhoff, 19-year-old Central High School student, playing steadily and flashing a strong all-around game, outclassed his 17-year-old rival from Roosevelt and was in trouble only once. That was in the first set when Kay had a 5-4 lead in games and a 30-40 advantage in points.

Luck came to Brinkerhoff's aid and he ran the score to deuce when one of his returns struck a soft spot in the court and skidded away from Kay's racquet. Bolstered by this unexpected help Brinkerhoff squared the match at 5—5 and then after the score was tied at 6—6, held his own serve and broke Kay's to win out. Though he lost, Kay will represent the District in the National interscholastic tournament because Brinkerhoff is scholastically

Burnett Wins J. Edgar Hoover Trophy in Federal Golf Play

First Day Total Wins For Fireman

Also Takes Class A Gross Individual Title; 2d Day Field Eight Strokes Short

The second-day field in the Federal Golf Association tournament at Indian Spring couldn't come within 8 strokes of Volney Burnett's 72, 72—144, of the first day, and the golfing fireman easily won the Class A gross individual crown, and the J. Edgar Hoover Trophy with his Monday total.

Maj. J. R. Francis, War Department, with 77, 75—152, tied Sam Harvey's first-day score for runner-up honors, 8 strokes back of Burnett, who won the title for the second time in three years. Defending Champion Jerry Hart was next with 78, 75—153.

The G. A. O. team successfully defended its crown, however, Hart, Harvey, Jock Olmsted and Victor Jones posting an aggregate total of 613 for an easy victory and the Andrew Mellon Trophy for another year.

The new trophy for team low net score in Class A ended in a two-way tie between War Department and Justice, with like totals of 585. Each department will have its name on the trophy, and keep it for six months each. Maj. Francis, former Champion Tom Belshe, Col. Buchanan and Capt. Parks comprised the War team, while Elmer Collins, Bill Hurd, Fred Berquist and Bill Sanford made up the Justice quartet.

Low net in Class A among the individual players went to Victor Jones with his 153 gross and 20 handicap for a 133 total. He was a member of the G. A. O. team.

Class B Honors

Team net and gross honors in Class B went to SEC and PWA, respectively, while the individual awards went to Dave Bent and Tom O'Brien, gross and net. Procurement and ICC split honors in teams for Class C, while J. J. Crowley's gross total and William Woehler's net topped their respective classes.

The largest field in the history of the tournament, 204, competed in the two-day affair. Trophies will be officially presented at the fall dinner.

Wooderson Primes For U. S. Debut With New Record

Manchester, England, June 6 (AP).—Sydney Wooderson, in his final race before his American debut, tonight bettered the listed world records for three-quarters of a mile. His time was 2 minutes 59.5 seconds.

The listed mark is 3:00.3, set by Wayne Rideout, of North Texas Teachers College, at Princeton University last year.

The slim Briton, holder of the world's mile record of 4:06.4, is to run at Princeton's Invitation meet June 17. In his most recent mile gallop, he was clocked in 4:07.4 in the Intercounties championship.

Wooderson, who flew to Manchester after working all day, ran the first quarter in 57.9 seconds, completed the half-mile mark in 2 minutes flat.

Don't Get Panicky When Canoe Overturns—Here's What to Do

Left—J. W. Burch, canoeing expert, strikes out for shore leaving Bette Burch, his daughter, to struggle in the water in his demonstration of what not to do if your canoe overturns. In his heavy clothes, Burch probably would not reach shore, and Bette's attempts to climb on the overturned canoe would meet with disaster also. Below—Here is the safe and sane way to cope with an upset. Burch has righted the canoe, and Bette has taken up a position inside to steer while Burch propels the canoe toward land by towing it from alongside

Use Upset Boat as Life Buoy Until Help Arrives; Principal 'Don't' Listed for Canoeists

By Al Hailey.

In event of an upset while canoeing, the canoe quickly becomes man's best friend, and the best policy at this point is to use it for a life buoy until you can get help or get safely ashore, J. W. Burch, Potomac Boat Club canoeing expert, demonstrated yesterday.

"Properly handled there is little chance of overturning, but the canoeist should think out in advance what he should do if he meets with such an accident," said Burch.

"The principal dont's," he said, "are don't get panicky, don't try to climb out of the water (this only forces the swamped canoe further under) don't try to hang on while it is bottom side up, and don't leave it and try to swim ashore."

Burch stressed the last "don't," pointing out that in one of the few accidents in recent years on the Potomac fatalities occurred when two upset canoests left their partially submerged canoe and tried to swim ashore in their heavy clothing.

"'It's always safe to stick with the canoe, for even when it's filled to the gunwales it will float," he said. "And after all why shouldn't it, it's mostly wood. A safe rule is to use the canoe as a life buoy when an upset occurs."

Burch pointed out that canoe accident fatalities are rare events but he emphasized that everyone should learn how to swim before taking up canoeing in a big way.

"If a person keeps calm in an upset and uses the canoe as a life belt, he is in little danger even if he doesn't swim," he said.

The best procedure to adopt in event of an upset, Burch said, is for one person to stretch out inside the filled canoe with only head and arms out of water. In this position, the canoe can be propelled while the other person lightly holds the gunwale from the outside, swimming with one hand and a leg thrash.

Indian Spring Squad Trails in Team Play Congressional Wins

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Indian Spring's defending champions and favorites to win the first-team title of the Women's District Golf Association, entered the final week of play 2 points back of the consistent Chevy Chase octet, after yesterday's semifinal play at Columbia.

While Chevy Chase was swamping Congressional, 10½ to 1½, sweeping three of the four foursomes and splitting the other, Manor took 3½ points from Indian Spring out of a possible 12, to place the Four Corners team 2 points back. The leaders were tied going into yesterday's play. The standing now is: Chevy Chase, 70½; Indian Spring, 68½.

Meanwhile the second teams concluded their round-robin scheduled at Manor, with Congressional winning the title by a 2-point margin over the host club. Manor drew a bye yesterday and stood on its 39½-point total, while Congressional swamped Indian Spring's last-place team, 8½ to ½, to finish 2 points ahead of the Norbeck Club representatives, with 47½.

Army and Navy finished third, 4 points back of Manor, while Chevy Chase, Columbia, Washington and Indian Spring trailed in that order. Congressional defended the title it won last year.

Members of the championship Congressional team included Mrs. H. H. Moffitt, Mrs. V. P. Simmons, Mrs. Davis Weir, Mrs. O. G. Eible, Mrs. Arnold McNitt and Mrs. C. T. Penn.

Chevy Chase had little difficulty scoring 10½ points over Congressional's fifth place team, the top duo of Mrs. Bishop Hill and Mrs. Landra Platt defeating Mrs. Myron Davy and Mrs. W. R. Bush, 2 up on the first nine and 3 and 2 on the second. Mrs. H. A. Knox and Mrs. J. J. McCarthy were the only Congressional scorers, against Mrs. F. D. Letts and Mrs. L. O. Cameron.

Mrs. Meckley and Mrs. Stokes lost the front nine to Marion Brown and Mrs. L. G. Pray, but evened the match on the tenth and won the back nine and the 18 to score 2 points against 1.

Mrs. K. S. Gales, southpaw of the 1938 champions, was the star of the second match as she and Mrs. C. S. Stern blanked Mrs. J. E. Dowdall and Mrs. H. J. Simmons. Mrs. Giles had 87, with fives on two par 3 holes.

Other first team macthes found the host Columbia team winning 10½ to 1½, over Washington, and Woodmount over Argyle by the same score.

7-Up A. C. Beats Old Milwaukee, 13-8

The 7-Up Athletic Club won its second Industrial League baseball game of the season yesterday on the Ellipse, beating Old Milwaukee after a comeback, 13 to 8. The Drinkmen overcame a 7-3 deficit in the fourth with four runs, and in the sixth staged a six-run uprising that sewed up the game. A single off Clements started the inning, three successful bunts followed, and Johnny Dugan and Jimmy Schwab wound up matters with a pair of homers.

The final Industrial League game is tomorrow, when Russell Motors takes its final swing at first half honors. If it wins, it plays off a first-place deadlock with Heurich either Friday or Saturday.

Dr. Pomeroy, Of Capital, Leads Seniors

D. C. Physician Tops 65-Year Group In New York Golf

By the Associated Press.

Rye, N. Y., June 6.—Charles H. Jennings, of Roaring Gap, N. C., shot a one-over-par 73 at the Apawamis Club today to equal the one-round tournament record for the National Seniors' Golf Championship and to lead the first-day competitors by a wide margin.

Jennings, 62-years old, won the seniors title in 1934. The record was established by Richard H. Doughty, of Detroit, in winning the 1936 championship. Doughty had a 78 today to take third place, a stroke behind Archibald M. Browne, of Southampton, L. I. Those two both competed in class "E" for golfers from 55 to 59 years. Jennings was in the 60-64 years division, in which he led his nearest rival by eight strokes.

Other first-day leaders were 65-69 years, Dr. Noah Pomeroy, Washington, D. C., and Dr. Thomas E. Jones, Seaview, L. I., 83; 70-74 years, Robert C. Mitchell, Mount Vernon, N. Y., 84; and 75 years and over, Frederick Snare, Southampton, 91.

Detroit Seeking Olympic; May Get Games for 1948

London, June 6. (AP).—Detroit bid for the 1944 Olympic games today, but delegates to the International Olympic Committee conference indicated the Motor City's chance won't come until 1948.

J. Lee Barrett and Douglas Roby, representing the Detroit Olympic games committee, did a little shrewd but dignified lobbying among the frock-coated I. O. C. delegates. They placed a huge patent leather-bound book before officials, extolling the virtues of Detroit, and they distributed gold leaf invitations to each delegate.

This action apparently was well received by the delegates, who were particularly impressed by Detroit's willingness to spend around $6,000,000, but, as one of them remarked:

"Most delegates seem to favor London for 1944, but Detroit's activity now will help them if they're still interested in 1948."

Roby impressed on the delegates that Detroit is interested in holding the games any time.

Printers Beaten By Pepco, 12 to 4

Improving its own Government League standing and shattering title hopes of the losers, Pepco nine smashed out a 12 to 4 victory over Union Printers yesterday on the South Ellipse. The victors scored in all but three innings, their most profitable stanza being the fourth. Six runs came across then, and there was no competition thereafter. Garvey pitched 7-hit ball, while his mates pounded three Printer tossers for 11 safeties.

Kong, Baxter, Trouble Duo, PerturbTurner

Dream Disturber, Shirt Ripper, Share Wrestling Card Spot

King Kong is back to disturb the dreams of those who plan to attend the blood-curdling wrestling exhibition Promoter Joe Turner will stage tomorrow night at Griffith Stadium.

Laverne Baxter, who delights himself by tearing up referees' shirts, will meet Jim Clinstock in the main event, and King Kong will start off the night of terror by appearing in a preliminary against Jules Strongbow.

King Kong—or Kazimirz Symkowski—is said to have recovered fully from an auto accident which has done his temperament no good and certainly added nothing to appearance of his rugged countenance.

The return of King Kong, one of the Grade B rough-house individuals who haunt the local ring, did not worry Turner as much as Baxter's strange shirt-tearing affliction.

"Since he returned from the Pacific Coast he has ripped to shreds two pretty white shirts owned by Referee Bennah Bortnick and will not pay for them," Turner confessed sadly. "I told him today I will suspend him if he persists in this, as Bortnick is getting tired of losing his shirt."

Bortnick has refused to referee Baxter's match, Turner said, adding he told Baxter he "positively will not tolerate such demonstrations against the referee." It was brought out referees usually are harmless individuals who do little more than get fallen on by the wrestlers or block the vision of the spectators.

Jack Hader and Dropkick Murphy will waltz through a co-feature bout tomorrow, while the supporting card brings together Gene Bowman and Nanjo Singh, Hank Metheny and Ernie Powers, and Kong and Strongbow.

U. student body are Wayne Ambrose, 1938-39 basketball captain; Burke Vidnovic, all-District halfback for two years; Frank Cairo, captain of C. U.'s first undefeated track team in its history, and John Kasunich, captain of the 1938 football team.

Royal Business, Paying $5, Wins Charles Town Feature

Johnston's Star Barely Misses Mark

Wins by 3 Lengths In 1.25 3-5 to Beat Schley Goree; Kai-Min Takes Show Spoils

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 6.—Making his fourth try of the meeting here, Capt. Ewart Johnston's Royal Business finally broke into the winner's circle with a smashing effort that was only one-fifth of a second of the track record held by Wise Sister. Royal Business ran the 7-furlong route in 1.25 3-5 and provided a $5 pay-off. The winner was the third favorite on the program to click.

Jockey A. Vesseli had the mount on the 4-year-old daughter of Sun Meadow and Pretty Business and brought the filly to the imaginary wire three lengths in advance of R. A. Bowman, jr's. Schley Goree. Third money in the limit field of eight went to Mrs. H. Horst's Kai-Min.

Schley Goree, ridden by Jockey Johnny Shanks, was first to show in front as the field went to the clubhouse turn. Ravenhurst was flattering his backers by being closest to the pace, with Worth-owning in third position. Royal Business, allowed to settle into her best stride, was moved up along the back stretch and steadied when only Schley Goree had her topped.

In the straightaway, Jockey Vesseli shook up his mount and Royal Business bounded to the front, and she race, as far as main money was concerned, was over. Schley Goree held on gamely to be second in front of a gang-rush for third money in which Kai Min survived.

Vesseli was riding his second winner of the day, having scored by a nose with L. Viemont's Thumb in the first race for maiden 2-year-olds. Doctor's Nurse set most of the pace before being caught just at the wire.

The "1 and 7" combination of Rare Gem and Nay Nay paid a $22.40 mutuel in the daily double.

U. S. Utilities Have Ample Power for War

Capacity 400 Per Cent More Than in 1917, C. W. Kellogg Says

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 6.—C. W. Kellogg, permanent president of the Edison Electric Institute, said today that, in the event of war, the electric utilities of the United States were prepared to produce more than the necessary power.

Opening the annual convention of the institute, an organization financed by the industry, he declared there was no reason to fear a lack of emergency electric energy.

"We are vastly better prepared to supply power for war needs today than we were in 1917," said Kellogg. "Although the population increase has been only 25 per cent, we can produce nearly 400 per cent more power than was then produced.

"Based on their former experience, he said, the concern of electric utilities in time of war will probably be occasioned "not by a shortage of generating capacity but, on the contrary, with how to sell the use of idle capacity."

Kellogg concluded: "I should like to close on a note of moderate optimism, but also with a warning. The results of the past year have confirmed the long established reputation of our industry for relative stability compared to other lines of business and it is therefore encouraging to find ourselves no worse off than we are after six years of attack by the Government of the most powerful Nation on earth, backed by a correspondingly rich treasury and correspondingly pervasive propaganda."

War Fear a Factor

Floyd L. Carlisle, chairman of Consolidated Edison Co., of New York, told the delegates:

"In discussing our domestic situation, the question pressing for solution is, how private industry can employ all the people able and willing to work. Blind, unreasoning criticism of Governmental policies will not cure the situations.

"Our American private economy today is giving work to at least 43,000,000 of our people, but is unable for the moment to employ about 10,000,000. Some of these 10,000 are perhaps unemployables.

"The fear of a European war and our possible involvement in it has undoubtedly played a considerable part in holding back increased production.

"There is a further widespread fear that we can never stop our present Government deficit financing. In my judgment, after nine years of unbalanced Federal budget, the surest thing to return prosperity is to determine at some time, in the not too distant future, to end this condition."

Convention officials estimated 2,500 delegates would be in attendance during the three days of session, much of which will be at the World's Fair.

'Big Board' Bars Margin Accounts For Partners

New York, June 6 (AP).—Partners in brokerage houses which are members of the New York Stock Exchange will be prohibited after June 30 from carrying personal margin accounts with their own or other member firms.

The exchange's department of member firms, it was disclosed today, is about to draft an announcement of this prohibition, agreed upon by the exchange and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The margin account restriction was intended originally as one of the steps in the exchange's 15-point reorganization plan of last October merely to apply to a partner carrying his account with his own firm, but was widened to the present form at the request of the SEC.

An exchange official said the restriction would make little difference, asserting that practically all brokers who traded on margin for themselves are able to operate on a cash basis anyway. Those who wish to operate on credit must, in the future, borrow directly at their banks.

Commodity Corp. To Buy $95,000,000 Cotton Loans

The Commodity Credit Corporation announced yesterday that it contemplated purchasing in July all 1937-38 cotton loans carried by banks and other lending agencies under supplemental 1¼ per cent contracts. These total about $95,000,000.

It said that institutions which participated in the 1938-39 cotton loan program could arrange to continue their investment in such loans after July 31 by executing a supplemental agreement with the CCC.

Under the proposed supplemental agreement, the CCC will purchase producers' notes for face value plus interest from the date of issue through July 31 at 2½ per cent and from July 31 to the date of purchase at the rate of 1 per cent.

Banks and lending agencies are carrying approximately $180,000,000 in 1938-39 loans.

N. J. Standard Oil Earns $5,000,000 a Month

Flemington, N. J., June 6 (AP).—W. S. Farish, president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, told stockholders at their annual meeting today that earnings of the company in the first quarter averaged slightly more than $5,000,000 a month compared to $6,500,000 a month in the like 1938 period.

He added: "We are very gratified under conditions that exist in the oil industry today that we are doing that well."

More Railroad Jobs

The Interstate Commerce Commission reported yesterday that Class 1 steam railways had 987,580 employes in mid-May, an increase of 5.74 per cent over May, 1938, and an increase of 0.78 of 1 per cent over April, 1939.

Wheat Prices Slip After Early Rally

Closings Unchanged To ¼ Cent Lower; Corn Prices Firm

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 6 (AP).—An advance of as much as ⅝ cent was the best that wheat prices could do on the recovery side of a nervous, erratic market today and all of this gain was lost before the close.

Although the market was free of the general liquidating pressure which caused yesterday's sharp break, there was little or no buying to stimulate a rally except at intervals after midsession. The result was that scattered orders on both sides of the market caused frequent small fluctuations.

Some buying was attributed to milling interests although no material flour business was confirmed aside from yesterday's sales, estimated as high as 1,000,000 barrels to the Government and through regular commercial channels. However, shippers sold 37,000 bushels to mills and ½ to 1 cent higher prices in the cash market stimulated some purchasing of futures.

Wheat closed unchanged to ¼ lower, compared with yesterday's finish, July 75⅛@75¼, September 75⅝@75½; corn unchanged to ⅜ higher, July 50⅛@50⅜; September 52; oats and rye ⅛@¾ higher and lard unchanged.

Cotton Futures Drop 25 to 75 Cents Per Bale

New York, June 6 (AP).—Cotton futures did an abrupt about face today that canceled all of Monday's gain and left the market 5 to 15 points lower. New crop deliveries were weakest. July was relatively steady, duplicating the previous high for the season of 9.18 cents early in the session.

Heavy selling elsewhere came through mill accounts, domestic and foreign liquidation and hedging. When early support for new crop months from Bombay brokers, who bought on narrower differences, subsided, the market started downward.

Washington news seemed without influence and most traders convinced the export subsidy plan is temporarily in the discard—saw little to affect the price structure.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil traders adopted a hands-off attitude today and turnover dropped to only 26 contracts. Although prices were unchanged to 2 points higher, observers attributed the slight rise more to lack of pressure than any fresh buying urge. July ended 6.56 bid; September, 6.72 bid; October, 6.76 bid; December, 6.84 bid.

Crude oil continued quiet at 5¾ cents bid in the Southeast and Valley, and 5¼ bid in Texas.

The total applied for was $304,724,000 and the total accepted $100,912,000 The average price was 99.999, equivalent to a rate of 0.004 per cent.

Prices Advance in More Active Trading Lack of Adverse News Is a Factor Treasury and Railroad Bonds Higher

New York, June 6.—The stock market improved today, both in volume and in prices. That comes under the heading of news, more or less like a man biting a dog or President Roosevelt appointing a conservative to a post of honor. We mustn't expect too much, but every once in so often the stock market does improve. Today there was a volume of 600,410 shares on the big board. By a little shaving of the corners, the houses in business in Wall street can remain in business at this rate and the SEC will have something to justify its existence.

Of importance to investors was the fact that prices improved on this greater activity, the composite average showing a gain of 0.43 point. It was difficult to find out why there should be any improvement in values and possibly it was because another week has passed without any independent country in Europe being taken over or without the C. I. O. staging another strike for the benefit of Mr. Lewis and the National Labor Relations Board.

Result of SEC Zeal

One wag suggests that all today's market proved was that the life of the stock market is much like plant life; it thrives on decay. The spreaders of enriching refuse have had their way for a number of years now and they have produced a market on which the investor seeking safety can get a return of less than 1 per cent and the speculator seeking enhancement of capital can get an investigation from the SEC if he is lucky enough not to get tremendous losses.

Certainly they can not claim that they have improved the market place for the honest taxpayer who may have saved a thousand or two dollars which he wishes to invest. True, the sharpshooter has been driven out, but the zeal of the police force has also made it well nigh impossible for the honest broker to make an honest living, and the investor has been deprived of the advantages of a fair market.

Sound Economics Needed

But all of us radicals are looking forward to the day when the New Deal conservatives will give way to sound economics and the man who saves a thousand dollars can have some assurance that he can invest at a moderate degree of interest and have some assurance that the thousand dollars, when paid back, will not be paid in some other kind of dollars. It may be very unsocial to desire such things, but the fact remains that the capitalistic system, which has given us a higher standard of living than any other system yet devolved, was built on very simple standards of honesty, both in Governmental currency and in the relations between one man and another.

It may all be built on the standards of the horse and buggy era, but investors are looking forward to the day, probably not so far away, when these principles will reassert themselves and when the priests of going into debt to yourself and spending yourself into debt in order to get rich and priming a pump with promises to pay yourself something in the future, and borrowing from wage earners with an I. O. U. on the promise of paying them something which has already been spent when he gets to be 60, etc., are thrown into the ash can where they belong.

News Favorable

But as of today we can consider only the day's developments. Stocks opened irregular and moved within a narrow range. Volume improved with a later gain in prices, and the day went on the record as the thirteenth advance in the last 16 sessions, but with the improvement slight. Business news was favorable, continuing the trend that has been noted since the coal companies succumbed to Mr. Lewis.

For those who are still interested in the stock market as and of itself, be it reported that United States Rubber was the day's most active stock and turned in a creditable performance with a rise of 1¾ points. Following it was Loft, unchanged at 10. Steels, rails, motors and utilities, as well as aviations, did well. Although most of the gains were fractional, Westinghouse was an exception, jumping three points. Gains of a point or more were made by Can. Smelting, C. & O., Goodyear, Great Northern preferred, Manville, Nickel and Union Pacific.

U. S. Rail Bonds Strong

Led by secondary rails and under the influence of several new highs in the Treasury group, listed bonds moved upward today with a considerable display of strength in certain sectors. The value of transactions increased sharply to $7,140,000 from $4,520,000 on Monday, as the composite average of 30 bonds added 0.24 point.

Trading in Government issues amounting to only $230,000 saw six new 1939 highs established. Obligations of foreign states also shared in the upward movement, especially securities of Latin-American republics, and their divisions. The entire Antioquia group scored fractional advances, while Brazilian lines added similar amounts, as did the Chilean group. Buenos Aires issues added over a point in some instances while Uruguay 4-4½s of '78 rose 3.

Gains of almost 2 points were made by Alleghany issues, while the entire Baltimore & Ohio, Chicago & North Western, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific and Northern Pacific groups scored minor advances. The average of five secondary rails gained 0.68 point. In the higher-trade group new highs were made by the C. & O. issues, while Pennsylvanias, Union Pacifics and Southern railways were considerably stronger.

Industrial issues shared in the general upward movements, as the averages showed a gain of 0.17 point. Traction bonds in the New York area moved higher, but the general trend of electric power and other public utility bonds was lower, showing a loss of 0.16 on the average.

Bethlehem to Issue $25,000,000 Bonds

New York, June 6 (AP).—Wall street financial quarters heard today that Bethlehem Steel Corporation soon would ask the Securities and Exchange Commission for permission to issue about $25,000,000 in mortgage bonds for offering late in June.

The proceeds would be used to reimburse the company for various expenditures, it was said. The same sources said they understood that, while no refunding is contemplated at present, Bethlehem Steel officials would consider later in the year the refunding of outstanding 4¼ per cent bonds.

Stock Exchange May Give Up Half Its Big Building

New York, June 6 (AP).—The Stock Exchange is threatening to give up half its famous $7,000,000 building on the corner of Broad and Wall streets—the front half, with the great colonnade facing J. P. Morgan & Co.—to reduce expenses.

The exchange in these thin pickings times is running into debt at the rate of $1,500,000 a year. William McChesney Martin, jr., president, looking around for ways to cut costs, thought the exchange was paying too much rent for the Broad street half of the property it lies on. (The exchange owns outright the New street, or rear, half.)

So Martin has asked the heirs of Matthew A. Wilks, son-in-law of Hetty Green, owners of the front lot, to reduce the more than $100,000 annual rental now paid for that lot.

If they don't, Martin intimated, the heirs might have a present of that front part, including about half of the trading floor, and they could just try to make a go of it. The traders would then coop themselves up in the dark back half.

Wall Street generally was inclined to take this threat as a joke, but a spokesman for Martin said he was seriously considering it, if the rent isn't reduced.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

"It is not necessary to be crazy to be a bridge player, but it "elps a lot" —these were the cryptic words of some well worn bridge expert. Watching bridge players talk, no one would doubt him.

Several years ago we were conducted through a State hospital for the insane. There we saw in the recreation room many of the harmless souls whose mentay quirks had brought them there, each one mumbling, talking, laughing or crying to himself.

Bridge players are not unlike our demented friends. They lurk in doorways, shops, theaters, restaurants, night clubs, everywhere. When they spy a victim they bear down upon him, pinion the confused creature and refuse to release him until he has heard them out.

The story of a bridge hand seems to burn within them. They must tell it to some one, but usually one is not enough. They must run it through the gamut of their friends and acquaintances before they are sated.

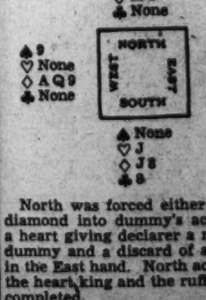
You have to be a little daffy to appreciate the proceedings of today's hand, in which a silly psychic bid resulted in a next-to-top on the board. East and West finally played the hand at four spades, doubled and were set for two for a loss of 500 points, as against the 600-odd points the adversaries would have received had they played the hand at game in hearts.

It required all the ingenuity of the psychic artist's partner to hold the loss to two tricks with an end play to boot.

The ace of hearts was led and a heart continued which declarer trumped. The king of spades lost to the ace, and a low club was returned, East putting up the jack in anticipation of developing an entry to dummy. South won with the king and returned a club, North taking the ace and East unblocking with the club queen. A third club lead put declarer on the board with the ten.

He played a heart to his hand and trumped; drew the two outstanding trumps. A spade was left on the table to complete the ruff-discard situation.

A low diamond was led. South ducked. Dummy put on the five, and North won with the ten. He was outplayed. Here were the remaining cards:



North was forced either to lead a diamond into dummy's ace or play a heart giving declarer a ruff in the dummy and a discard of a diamond in the East hand. North actually led the heart king and the ruff-sluff was completed.

Declarer was set two tricks at four spades doubled, losing a heart, a spade, two clubs and a diamond.

Some hiked up the Black Rock Trail, others watched the inter-departmental softball games, while others joined in various games and races—and everyone enjoyed the delicious dinners cooked over the outdoor fireplaces. At 2 p. m. an inspection was made of Hi-Catoctin Camp, which is rapidly nearing completion.

The winners in the contest for a free-week at Hi-Catoctin Camp were: J. W. Justice (Public Health Service) and Carol Cleaver, whose father is associated with the Bureau of Standards. Winners of the various events were: Medley race—Charles Krochmal (Treasury) and Miss Doris Levy. Balloon race—Conrad Buettner and J. F. Graber. Swing music will be provided by the I. D. R. A. Orchestra, under the direction of Fred A. Fetter jr.

The orchestra is a brand new organization due to the considerable efforts of Fetter, Maj. E. M. Jones and the following members: Kenneth Scott, D. Members of the mapping unit in the Rural Electrifications Administration will hold their last dance of the season tomorrow night in Moose Hall, 1414 I street northwest.

Mrs. Dorothy Dunn, supervisor of C. C. C. selections, announces that applications are being taken for C. C. C. camp jobs, at 1358 Florida avenue northeast. Applicants must be between 17 and 23 years, unemployed and in need of work.

Bob Burns Says—

It always pays to be insured against the unexpected. When we don't get ready for emergencies—we always seem to land in a mess of trouble. I know a man who has every kind of insurance on the market. He's even insured his thumb against hangnail just in case he might ever want to do some hitchhikin'.

I remember last year when Aunt Dodie was workin' for Mrs. Van Snoot she got bawled out once for not havin' the silverware very tidy. Aunt Dodie said, "What's wrong with the way I clean that there silverware, Mrs. Van Snoot? I polished every piece only last Tuesday!"

Mrs. Van Snoot said, "I can't help that, Dodie. Clean it again! There's an epidemic of burglary in this neighborhood—and I'd hate for it to go out lookin' like it does."

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

Epic of North Florida Backwoods

Record Breaking Best Seller

A COLUMN OF SMOKE rose thin and straight from the cabin chimney. The smoke was blue where it left the red of the clay. It trailed into the blue of the April sky and was no longer blue but gray. The boy Jody watched it, speculating. The fire on the kitchen hearth was dying down. His mother was hanging up pots and pans after the noon dinner. The day was Friday. She would sweep the floor with a broom of ti-ti and after that, if he were lucky, she would scrub it with the corn shucks scrub. If she scrubbed the floor she would not miss him until he had reached the Glen. He stood a minute, balancing the hoe on his shoulder.

The clearing itself was pleasant if the unweeded rows of young shafts of corn were not before him. The wild bees had found the chinaberry tree by the front gate. They burrowed into the fragile clusters of lavender bloom as greedily as though there were no other flowers in the scrub; as though they had forgotten the yellow jessamine of March; the sweet bay and the magnolias ahead of them in May. It occurred to him that he might follow the swift line of flight of the black and gold bodies, and so find a bee-tree, full of amber honey. The winter's cane syrup was gone and most of the jellies. Finding a bee-tree was nobler work than hoeing and the corn could wait another day. The afternoon was alive with a soft stirring. It bored into him as the bees bored into the chinaberry blossoms, so that he must be gone across the clearing, through the pines and down the road to the running branch. The bee-tree might be near the water.

HE STOOD HIS HOE against the splitrail fence. He walked down the cornfield until he was out of sight of the cabin. He swung himself over the fence on his two hands. Old Julia the hound had followed his father in the wagon to Grahamsville, but Rip the bull-dog and Perk the new feice saw the form clear the fence and ran toward him. Rip barked deeply but the voice of the small mongel was high and shrill. They wagged deprecatory short tails when they recognized him. He sent them back to the yard. They watched after him indifferently. They were a sorry pair, he thought, good for nothing but the chase, the catch and the kill. They had no interest in him except when he brought them their plates of table scraps night and morning. Old Julia was a gentle thing with humans, but her worn-toothed devotion was only for his father, Penny Baxter. Jody had tried to make up to Julia, but she would have none of him.

"You was pups together," his father told him, "ten year gone, when you was two year old and her a baby. You hurted the leetle thing, not meanin' no harm. She cain't bring herself to trust you. Hounds is often that-a-way."

He made a circle around the sheds and corn-crib and cut south through the black-jack. He wished he had a dog like Grandma Hutto's. It was white and curly-haired and did tricks. When Grandma Hutto laughed and shook and could not stop, the dog jumped into her lap and licked her face, wagging its plumed tail as though it laughed with her. He would like anything that was his own; that licked his face and followed him as old Julia followed his father. He cut into the sand road and began to run east. It was two miles to the Glen, but it seemed to Jody that he could run forever. There was no ache in his legs, as when he hoed the corn. He slowed down to make the road last longer. He had passed the big pines and left them behind. Where he walked now, the scrub had closed in, walling in the road with dense sand pines, each one so thin it seemed to the boy it might make kindling by itself. The road went up an incline. At the top he stopped. The April sky was framed by the tawny sand and the pines. It was as blue as his homespun shirt, dyed with Grandma Hutto's indigo. Small clouds were stationary, like bolls of cotton. As he watched, the sunlight left the sky a moment and the clouds were gray.

"There'll come a little old drizzly rain before night-fall," he thought.

THE DOWN GRADE tempted him to lope. He reached the thick-bedded sand of the Silver Glen road. The tar-flower was in bloom, and fetterbush and sparkleberry. He slowed to a walk, so that he might pass the changing vegetation tree by tree, bush by bush, each one unique and familiar. He reached the magnolia tree where he had carved the wild-cat's face. The growth was a sign that there was water nearby. It seemed a strange thing to him, when earth was earth and rain was rain, that scrawny pines should grow in the scrub, while by every branch and lake and river there grew magnolias. Dogs were the same everywhere, and oxen and mules and horses. But trees were different in different places.

"Reckon it's because they cain't move none," he decided. They took what food was in the soil under them.

The east bank of the road shelved suddenly. It dropped below him twenty feet to a spring. The bank was dense with magnolia and loblolly bay, sweet gum and gray-barked ash. He went down to the spring in the cool darkness of their shadows. A sharp pleasure came over him. This was a secret and a lovely place.

A spring as clear as well water bubbled up from nowhere in the sand. It was as though the banks cupped green leafy hands to hold it. There was a whirlpool where the water rose from the earth. Grains of sand boiled in it. Beyond the bank, the parent spring bubbled up at a higher level, cut itself a channel through white limestone and began to run rapidly down-hill to make a creek. The creek joined Lake George. Lake George was a part of the St. John's River, the great river flowed northward and into the sea. It excited Jody to watch the beginning of the ocean. There were other beginnings, true, but this one was his own. He liked to think that no one came here but himself and the wild animals and the thirsty birds.

HE WAS WARM from his jaunt. The dusky glen laid cool hands on him. He rolled up the hems of his blue denim breeches and stepped with bare dirty feet into the shallow spring. His toes sunk into the sand. It oozed softly between them and over his bony ankles. The water was so cold that for a moment it burned his skin. Then it made a rippling sound, flowing past his pipe-stem legs, and was entirely delicious. He walked up and down, digging his big toe experimentally under smooth rocks he encountered. A school of minnows flashed ahead of him down the growing branch. He chased them through the shallows. They were suddenly out of sight as though they had never existed. He crouched under a bared and overhanging live-oak root where a pool was deep, thinking they might reappear, but only a spring frog wriggled from under the mud, stared at him, and dove under the tree root in a spasmodic terror. He laughed.

"I ain't no 'coon. I'd not ketch you," he called after it.

A breeze parted the canopied limbs over him. The sun dripped through and lay on his head and shoulders. It was good to be warm at his head while his hard calloused feet were cold. The breeze died away, the sun no longer reached him. He waded across to the opposite bank where the growth was more open. A low palmetto brushed him. It reminded him that his knife was snug in his pocket; that he had planned as long ago as Christmas, to make himself a flutter-mill.

HE HAD NEVER built one alone. Grandma Hutto's son Oliver had always made one for him whenever he was home from sea. He went to work intently, frowning as he tried to recall the exact angle necessary to make the mill-wheel turn smoothly. He cut two forked twigs and trimmed them into two Y's of the same size. Oliver had been very particular to have the cross-bar round and smooth, he remembered. A wild cherry grew halfway up the bank. He climbed it and cut a twig as even as a polished pencil. He selected a palm frond and cut two strips of the tough fiber, an inch wide and four inches long. He cut a slit lengthwise in the center of each of them, wide enough to insert the cherry twig. The strips of palm frond must be at angles, like the arms of a windmill. He adjusted them carefully. He separated the Y-shaped twigs by nearly the length of the cherry cross-bar and pushed them deep into the sand of the branch bed a few yards below the spring.

Solution to Yesterday's Puzzle

British Officer Spy, Japanese Say

Peiping, June 6 (AP).—The long Japanese silence regarding two British officers held at Kalgan was broken today by Domei, Japanese news agency, which said one of the officers had collected military information inside the Japanese zone of operations in China.

A dispatch from Kalgan said the officer, Lieut. Col. C. R. Spear, military attache to the British embassy, arrested with Lieut. John Cooper, had planned to supply his information to British officials through wireless sets in the possession of the Chinese Communist army.

Clipper in Marseilles

Marseilles, France, June 6 (U.P.).—The Yankee Clipper arrived today at 3:55 p. m., after an uneventful flight from Lisbon, Portugal, to complete the first half of the third regular transatlantic air mail round trip from New York.

Dr. Smith Calls 3 Witnesses in Defense Of Her Administration of Training School

Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith yesterday called three witnesses to defend her regime at the National Training School for Girls at the public hearing on her dismissal as superintendent in 1937.

At the same time two Congressmen requested the Commissioners to send them a copy of the record. They are Representative Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, and Representative Tomason (Democrat), of Texas.

Meanwhile, District officials conferred on the drastic cut in the institution's budget by Congress and ordered the Board of Public Welfare to comply with a 25 per cent reduction in the staff at the school.

Mrs. Buchanan Testifies

Mrs. Ruth Buchanan, member of the Council of Social Agencies and League of Women Voters, said both groups indorsed Dr. Smith's theories and were eager to co-operate in their fulfillment. She said she was "horrified" when Dr. Smith was dismissed without an opportunity for "an immediate public hearing."

"I'm not trying to defend Dr. Smith but in her case an official was put out without being given the charges or a public hearing," she said.

She related on a visit to the institution with Mrs Roosevelt, Senator King, and the late Senator Copeland, that after viewing the school, the Senators said they'd "rather see a girl in hell." This occurred, she said, before the new building program at the school.

Mrs. Woodard on Stand

Mrs Gertrude Woodard, dean of Miner Teachers College, told of her association with Dr. Smith and of having the former superintendent lecture to the students. She said she was "very favorably impressed" with Dr. Smith's ideas of supervising the training school, population of which is 85 per cent colored.

"Dr. Smith was attempting a program which would have been of great benefit to the girls and when she left I wrote to her to express my deep regret," Mrs. Woodard stated.

She said Dr. Smith's program "would have gradually built up within the girls self control."

"The inmates were treated kindly and with sympathy by the superintendent," she said.

Nurse Is Witness

She admitted she had "very little personal knowledge" of conditions at the school, having visited there on only one occasion during Dr. Smith's regime.

Contradicting previous witnesses, Mrs. Mildred Davis, a former nurse at the institution, said she heard "little profanity," "had little trouble handling girls in the clinic," and evidenced "lack of co-operation among the inmates."

In answer to a question by Dr. Smith whether she ever saw any whisky in the clinic, Mrs. Davis said she had, but that the whisky was not brought there by either the inmates or herself.

Mrs. Lualda Latta, teacher at the school, handling only white girls, said she agreed with Dr. Smith that the girls should have more freedom but "to know where to stop."

Joint Management For Concerts

Dr. Harl McDonald, the new general manager of Philadelphia Orchestra, announced yesterday that the organization would hereafter appear in Washington under the joint management of Constance Albright Snow and Helen Fetter Cook, who will maintain a boxoffice with the Arthur Jordan Piano Co. at 1239 G street. Because of the delay caused by the changes in management, subscribers will have until June 30 to renew their seat locations.

There will be five concerts next season, as usual, on Tuesday evenings at 8:45 in Constitution Hall. The dates are October 24, Ormandy conducting with Fritz Kreisler as soloist; November 28, Leopold Stokowski conducting; January 2, Ormandy with Jehudi Menuhin as soloist; February 27, Ormandy with Arthur Rubinstein as soloist; April 2, Ormandy conducting.

Student Pilot Who Took Off for 'Mars' In Rented Plane Rescued From Atlantic

By the Associated Press.

Chatham, Mass., June 6.—After failing far short of his asserted destination—the planet Mars—Cheston L. Eshelman, 22, Carlisle, Pa., student flier, who was fished from the water on Georges Banks, was bound for Boston tonight on the trawler Villanova, with about 90,000 pounds of cod and haddock.

Capt. Astman Bjartmarz, the trawler's Icelandic skipper, radioed the Associated Press that Eshelman was rescued as his rented plane sank after he was forced down near the Villanova approximately 175 miles east southeast of Boston at 6:30 a. m. (E.S.T.) today. The young man was unmjured the captain said, but under treatment for shock and exhaustion.

In another radiogram to F. J. O'Hara & Sons, operators of the Villanova, Capt. Bjartmarz said Eshelman refused to divulge his true destination—"repeats bound for Mars." He reported Eshelman "flew blind all night in fog" and that vibration caused a break in a gas line which prevented the flier from pumping reserve gasoline to the main tank.

Supporting the expressed belief of friends that Eshelman was attempting a transatlantic flight, it was learned that after taking off from Camden, N. J., last night, ostensibly for an hour's practice, he alighted at a farm 18 miles north of Philadelphia and picked up about 10 five-gallon cans of gasoline. Nils Hedin, owner of the farm, reported Eshelman told a man who assisted him that he intended to fly "out West."

"Wrong Way" Corrigan told the same story when he landed in Ireland and the student flier's mother, Mrs. Bertha M. Eshelman, conceded that although her son "never mentioned trying to fly to Europe, he was excited about the flights of Corrigan and the other transatlantic fliers."

Charles Kulp, attorney for Edward Walz, owner of the airplane in which Eshelman dropped into the Atlantic, said at Camden, N. J., tonight he had obtained a warrant for Eshelman's arrest on a larceny charge.

Boston police have been requested to arrest Eshelman when he lands.

Although Eshelman came into possession of the plane legally, Kulp said, the warrant charges him with using it unlawfully.

Eshelman told Capt. Bjartmarz he was an inventor and that he had been employed by the Glenn L. Martin aviation plant at Baltimore. He took his first and only other solo flight recently, and when he rented the plane from Edward Walz, manager of a flying school, Walz thought he showed more than a student's usual curiosity in instrument navigation. Eshelman had about ten hours of flying instruction and was licensed to fly near the airport in a restricted area.
